

CITY CONTROL OF PHONE SYSTEM

Finance Commissioner of Long Beach Sees
Issue From Money
Viewpoint

ONE-THIRD LESS FOR OPERATION

BY HARRY B. RILEY,
City Finance Commissioner

MUNICIPAL ownership of public utilities is a question which will bear close scrutiny and which deserves careful consideration. City acquisition and control of public service holdings should not be consummated indiscriminately and without scrupulous investigation beforehand.

City ownership of some utilities in some cities has paid; in others it has failed; any honest man must admit that the municipally-owned waterworks system in Long Beach has paid.

Mayor Lisenby has brought to public attention the telephone situation in Long Beach, with the tentative suggestion that relief from what is generally conceded to be an unfortunate and unnecessary condition here might possibly be afforded by this city's purchase and operation of the Home phone system.

The mayor has probably given that question more attention than any other one of the five city commissioners; besides, he has the advantage of practical experience and intimate knowledge, having formerly been identified with the phone business.

Mayor States Question

The mayor has offered the reminder that the present manner of service is a little short of a nuisance, owing to its dual nature, as one man put it, "a double dose of trouble with a double dose of pay"; going further, Mayor Lisenby has cited three alternatives presenting what appear to be the only practicable courses for relief:

- The phone companies merger.
- Interchangeable service.
- City ownership.

Then there have naturally followed these three questions:

- Which one preferable?
- Are one probable?
- When possible?

Solons' Co-operation

Again making the admission that Mayor Lisenby, who is public property commissioner, probably has gone deeper into the problem than any one of the rest of the commissioners and I being certain that he knows more about the issue than do I, I am confident that the need for a change of some sort is appreciated by all in authority.

Public at large, and that the entire legislative body will gladly do all within its power to hasten the relief so palpably demanded.

To me, as commissioner of finance and accounting, the feature of the situation which most forcibly appeals, very naturally, I think, is the financial feature; and in pursuit of that line of thought I have looked up some figures which might possibly be of value to those positively advocating municipal ownership.

City Ownership Saving

Municipal ownership would mean the following savings, as compared with private ownership.

State taxes, 4½ per cent of income.

Franchise, 2 per cent of income.

Interest returns upon investment under existing laws, 27 per cent of income.

Total, 33½ per cent of income.

In other words, the city could, according to those figures, which are absolutely authentic and can be substantiated by anybody desiring to make inquiry, operate a local telephone plant one-third cheaper than it can be operated under private ownership, all other things being equal, all the while paying out as much in wages, hiring as many employees and giving just as good service. In that matter of "all other things being equal" lies the rub. It remains to be seen whether a city, inexperienced, can operate as efficiently and economically as companies having the advantages of long practice and experts in service.

That one-third could be made felt to the public good either through reduction in rates to the public or in the piling up of revenues in the city treasury.

Waterworks Example

The same thing here proposed as a future possibility with reference to telephone has been proved as a past performance in the case of municipal ownership of waterworks.

Final disposition, of course, is up to the people of Long Beach, whether it be the forcing of a telephone merger to get rid of the dual phone nuisance, the forcing of interchangeable service between the two companies now in the field or, finally, municipal ownership. Advertisement.

"A wonderful treat!"

"None should miss it!"

"Worth many times the price of admission!"

"It is educational, as well as entertaining!"

These and scores of other delighted expressions were heard yesterday afternoon and evening following the matinee and evening programs given by the Redpath-Horner Chautauqua in the tent at the corner of Third and Bush streets.

The whole-hearted reception that is being given the seven-day Chautauqua course in this city far exceeds the most sanguine expectations of the management and local boosters.

The praise that is being bestowed upon the various offerings is unqualified. Those who have attended the Chautauqua so far, and they are legion, leave out all "ifs and ands" when telling their friends of what they have seen and heard.

Variety of Appeal

One of the things that is making for the Chautauqua's success is the fact that the programs have a wide variety of appeal; people in all walks of life are entertained and stimulated; there is something in every program to appeal to everyone.

Yesterday afternoon's offerings were exceptionally well received. The program was a well-balanced one and the applause that greeted the numbers was such as to dispel all doubt as to their popularity. Bellino and his wonderful accordion scored tremendously.

The Grecian poses of Julius Caesar Nayphe brought forth exclamation after exclamation of delight from the large audience.

This afternoon Thaviu and his band are furnishing the entire program. This organization consists of twenty-six pieces. San Francisco exposition visitors last year were charmed by the work of Thaviu's band, many saying that the big work fair had no better musical attraction than this.

Bellino Makes Hit

Last night's Chautauqua program was a treat, so are all the Chautauqua programs. Bellino with his big accordion is a whole pipe organ by himself and the instrument itself is different from the old accordion the children used to pump in years gone by. It is ornately trimmed with silver and has keys along its sides and its owner surely knows how to handle it.

He played operatic, patriotic and popular airs, one after the other, and the huge audience was reluctant to permit him to stop, but there were other things on the program. Bellino played a medley of patriotic airs, a feature being "The Star Spangled Banner," the big audience rising instantly as the thrilling familiar strains rang out.

Noah Beilharz in "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" was wonderful in his versatility. As he impersonated the characters one after the other, one forgot Beilharz and saw in very fact the character he meant to portray. Jack Means, his wife, the old preacher, Bud, Simpering Mirandy, Stocky, Pearson, the old one-legged soldier and the schoolmaster himself. It took some time to tell the story, but the large audience sat spell-bound, except for the ripples of laughter which shot through the tent at the various sallies of humor.

ANN PENNINGTON, FAMOUS PLAYERS-PARAMOUNT STAR.

The wild waves have evidently hinted to Ann Pennington that the water's fine. She has donned her most becoming bathing suit and a carefree manner for a swim. The costume is easily explained. It's just one stripe after another, alternating purple and white. The material is taffeta and the bloomers match the purple. Neptune's daughter probably never dreamed of a bathing cap like this, but it's just the thing for a beach costume. Miss Pennington recently became a Famous Players-Paramount star.

RESOLUTIONS BY CO. L

Resolutions of appreciation, to the people, organizations and business houses of Orange county, passed by the officers and members of Company L, Seventh Infantry, California Militia, follow.

Whereas, The people of Orange county, both fraternally and individually, together with the business houses and newspapers of said county, have so generously given us the glad hand of encouragement and appreciation, both in the interest shown in our welfare and by the presentation to the company of a beautiful silk flag; and by supplying us with so many added comforts of life, which would not be received by us otherwise, such as lemons, "house-wives" for mending purposes, newspapers, tobacco, financial aid for the company fund, and many other articles, all greatly appreciated, but too numerous to mention; and last, but not least, for having so kindly looked after our dependent wives, mothers, brothers and sisters at home; and

Whereas, The officers and men of Company L appreciate what has been done for them in Orange county and wish by some means to let their friends and fellow citizens at home know that their efforts and assistance are appreciated; now

Therefore, It Is Resolved, That Company L by these resolutions, hereby expresses to the people and business houses of Orange county their great and heartfelt appreciation for that which has been and is being done, both for us in the field and for our loved ones at home; and we sincerely hope that when we return you can feel that we have been worthy of your efforts in our behalf.

It Is Further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to J. C. Metzgar, secretary of the Orange County Chamber of Commerce; the Evening Blade of Santa Ana; the Santa Ana Register of Santa Ana; the Orange News of Orange; the Tustin Daily News of Tustin; the City Council of the city of Santa Ana; the Santa Ana Lodge No. 794, R. P. O. E.; and to the Daughters of Veterans, Tent No. 10, of Santa Ana.

News From Co. L

Nogales, Ariz., July 15.

Today (Sunday) was inspection day. The inspection was of mess kits, rifles and quarters. As usual Company L was among the top notchers.

Corporal Mix's squad received the highest compliment of any squad in the Third Battalion. Major Allen, our battalion commander, said that he had not seen a neater tent in a long time. That fourth squad is quite a bunch of boys.

Private Ritter has gone into the tailoring business since the boys received the housewives boxes from the Daughters of Veterans. Bill's first job was to mend his trousers.

Privates Padgham and Lamme are the washermen today. They put out a good-sized washing. By the time we get home the boys will certainly know the art of laundrying.

We had parade and review last night, the first since we have been in camp. It was a mighty pretty sight. It was a battalion review before Major Allen.

Tomorrow (Sunday), we will all go to church and take it easy. The boys will have plenty of time to write letters.

A telegram reached us today from our friend, Mr. Connes, of Orange, telling Captain McBride that some cakes would be here for our Sunday dinner. Those cakes won't go a begging around Company L.

It was thought for a while this have been represented on the list for some time.

Laming Worthington Evans, controller of the foreign trade department of the Foreign Office, gave the following explanation of the latest extension of the Trading with the Enemy Act:

"As regards the United States list this may roughly be divided into four classes:

- "First, German firms with head offices or control in Germany.
- "Second, German firms incorporated in the United States, and therefore technically American entities. We have dealt with these firms on their morning that we had lost our goat, but Private Price of the Second squad, came to the rescue.

Private Ward is getting quite a crop of chin whiskers. If he lets them grow much longer he will have a regular goat.

Company L expects to draw guard duty pretty soon, but we don't know just when. We are ready for it.

The movies are quite attractive to the boys here. There is a Lyric theater here, so we are reminded of the Lyric at home. They have some pretty good pictures here.

The root beer stands are numerous here and the boys that can like that beverage sure hit it hard.

The Twelfth Infantry of the regular army has established canteens near the camp, so the boys can get most anything they want.

The boys have had some fun with a "stunt." They wet a piece of paper and heated a coin and lay it on the body of some one asleep, and he doesn't sleep very long thereafter.

Major Allen also said that Squad No. 5, under Corporal Towler, had the proper saying, which was "watchful waiting."

It is quite interesting to see this little town of Nogales with all the soldiers and the difference in the way Uncle Sam clothes his men and the uniform that the Mexicans wear.

PRIVATE F. H. MITCHELL,
For the Company.

BRITAIN BLACKLISTS 80 COMMERCIAL FIRMS IN BUSINESS IN U. S.

LONDON, July 18.—Today the British government published a list of from seventy to eighty business firms and individuals domiciled in the United States with which residents of the United Kingdom are forbidden to trade. This is the first time that any American firms have been placed on the statutory list, which is better known as the Trading with the Enemy Act blacklist. All other countries have been represented on the list for some time.

CITY TRUSTEES

STREET OPENING
GIVEN ANOTHER
SEVERE JOLT,
A SET-BACK

Long-Drawn Out Subject Is Put Back, Where It Was Just About a Year Ago

The opening of Poinsettia street between Washington avenue and Fourteenth street is trying to beat the building ordinance for a record.

The building ordinance has a head start. It began its meanderings into the meetings of the City Trustees several years ago, and its ghostlike form keeps drifting back to disturb the minds of the men who labor almost every Monday night to straighten out tangles and make progress straight.

The Poinsettia street opening began its attendance upon municipal deliberations about a year ago. Through frequency of appearance the street opening hopes to catch up with the hoary building ordinance.

Last night Poinsettia street opening got a new start. It was hit in the middle of its anatomy, and its agony ended when it was found that the whole long year of prayerful endeavor had put it right back where it was when it started.

Some years ago, C. C. Tratt deeded the city a 12-foot alley so that the city would lay water pipes to some houses back of the Tratt residence on Washington avenue. Since then Tratt has sold, given away or otherwise disposed of some two or three houses to the rear of the one facing on Washington, and one of those acquiring a home on the alley is Tratt's son-in-law, Crawford.

Crawford wants his house to face on a street instead of on an alley. He was the fire that kept the fuse burning. The city dads never had a chance to forget the opening of Poinsettia avenue.

Last night seemed to be the beginning of the end. A resolution was presented for opening the street by making it thirty feet and two inches wide, instead of twelve feet.

McPhee stepped on the fuse. He declared war on the thirty-foot street, entered the trenches and spiked the petitioner's gun, after a hand to hand encounter with Capt. Crawford of the Poinsettia brigade.

McPhee said that never—no, never—would he vote to accept thirty feet as a street. He said by the time the sidewalks were taken off there wouldn't be enough ridiculous street left to trundle a tamale wagon over.

Crawford explained that the property was so situated that it was the best that could be done. To make it wider would slice a piece of Willie McDonald's front yard off and might even carry away his front steps. Crawford didn't care what it was called, so long as the street was made wider, and since thirty feet seemed to be about the best that could be done, he certainly wanted it done, and the petitioner would be all-fired thankful forever.

Mayor Visel said that it looked to him as though in all justice the adjustment of getting more land for the street was up to Tratt.

It was finally decided to sidetrack the resolution for further time. So it was sidetracked, and heaven only knows how many more times it will be up before it passes into history.

Automatic Flagman
A letter to Mayor Visel from President Shoup of the P. E. stated that an automatic flagman will be placed at the McFadden street crossing. It was at this crossing that J. M. Cain and two others were killed in a wreck three years ago.

E. L. Deacon was granted two additional jitney licenses.
A letter asking the city to contribute $25 to a fund to fight septic tank patents was filed. The trustees decided to hoard the money.

Wells & Bressler, contractors, asked that a bond be fixed so that they could proceed with contract work without giving a bond for each job. The bond was fixed at $5,000.

Is It Evasion?
The Beach Light Co. offered a bond as electricians. It gave 515 Garnsey street as its place of business. City Clerk Vegely said the company is here from Los Angeles to wire the Lyric Theater, and possibly do other jobs. It does not want to pay the $5 a day transient license. Vegely told the petitioner he would have to have a permanent location here, and the petition filed last night gave that permanent location as 515 Garnsey street.

The trustees suspected that the petitioner was trying to evade the transient law. Greenleaf and McPhee were named as a committee to investigate, with power to act.

Bids for Fertilizer
Three bids for the street sweepings and manure of the city stables were received: J. F. Jackson Co., Los Angeles, $227; Shelley Horton, who has the contract now, $201,500; H. L. Ebel, $141. Each bid was for the next year's output. The Los Angeles firm got the contract.

East First Street
F. M. Grigsby and G. R. Smith were given permission to buy crushed rock and use the city oiling outfit for repairing some bad places on East First. Grigsby said the trouble there was that Crandall did not carry out his contract to look after the street, and some of the covering was lifted by traffic because there was not enough rock on it.

Final reading and passage was given the resolution for crushed rock and oil paving on Orange avenue between Chestnut and Bishop. This work is being forced down under the Vrooman act.

Thirty Days' Time
The Orange County Fanciers' Association was granted use of the city hall for the evening of July 28.

Property owners on Richland avenue between Main and Ross were given thirty days' time in which to put down sidewalks and curbs, as ordered by the board.

A petition for crushed rock and oil paving of East Third from Ross to Pacific was referred back for a conference between the contractors, Wells & Bressler, and the school board regarding paving in front of the McKinley school.

Raise in Salary
The street superintendent was instructed to fill a washout gap in English street.

Tubbs stated that he has found that most cities pay their motorcops $125 a month. Santa Ana pays Motorcop Cook, who Tubbs said had made good, $100, and Cook takes care of his machine out of that. His salary was raised to $120.

Fire Chief Jackson was granted $20 expenses for attendance at the fire chiefs' convention at San Diego next month.

H. L. Zimmerman was appointed a special police without pay by the city to serve for the fire department when owners of buildings damaged by fire want some one to watch the premises.

Mayor Going Fishing
Mayor Visel was given a three-weeks leave of absence. Next week he starts on a fishing and hunting trip into Mono county.

Tubbs and Greenleaf reported the purchase of forty tons of barley hay and fifteen tons of alfalfa hay at $15 a ton.

Adjournment was to next Monday night. All trustees were present last night.

71,405 ACRES LAND IN IMPERIAL OPENED

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—Notice of revocation of the land withdrawal, of April 2, 1909, in connection with the Yuma Reclamation project, affecting 71,405 acres in northern Imperial county, was received yesterday by Register of Land and Receiver Mitchell, of the land office, from Commissioner Clay Taliman at Washington. It is roughly estimated that the land subject to entry is worth upward of $350,000. Much of it is already under cultivation, with fine farms and homes, but 9306 acres are absolutely free from previous claims, 47,307 acres are covered in existing entries or are patented, 12,862 acres are suspended from entry and disposal pending survey and 643.07 acres are covered by pending applications and are not subject to settlement or entry by others than applicants.

YOUTHS OF CAMP
WILKIE RETURN

ONE MISHAP

Y. M. C. A. Youngsters Benefitted Tremendously by Splendid Outing

When 100 boys can be taken to a camp and carried through an aggressive program of swimming, boating, mountain hiking, baseball, basketball and tennis tournaments, quito, volley ball, and brought home and delivered safely to their parents without a single case of sickness or injury and with every boy better physically, mentally and morally for having had the experience, that is rated as quite an achievement.

That is exactly what was done during the past two weeks by the Orange and San Bernardino County Y. M. C. A.

From Orange County 55 boys made the trip and judging by the hearty expressions of appreciation received from the boys, every one would be glad to go back for two weeks more of the same kind of outing.

The return was made Saturday, leaving Avalon at 3:45 on the Cabrillo. The crowd was met by a large truck at San Pedro and Santa Ana was reached at 9:45 in the evening.

According to several of the leaders and boys who have attended a number of the camps, the camp just completed was from every standpoint the best ever held by this county. George Oertly of Garden Grove, who has attended every camp for ten years, said that the spirit of fellowship and co-operation was the best he had ever seen.

The statistical report on the various activities has not been made yet by Secretary E. M. Brown, but already it can be seen that especially from the religious side this camp has been remarkably strong. Many boys who went to camp for the sole purpose of

MYSTERY SURROUNDS
ENTRANCE HUTCHINS'
HOME LAST NIGHT

Mystery surrounds the entrance last night of the residence of J. P. Hutchins at 627 North Birch by unknown parties.

The Hutchins family is at San Diego, where Mr. Hutchins and daughter went yesterday to join Mrs. Hutchins, who has been there for a week with a sister who is seriously ill.

Miss Carrie Graham of the Dragon who has the north rooms of the residence, found the front door open this morning and notified L. Bando, who resides across the street. The latter informed City Marshal Jernigan of the occurrence and Officers Pond and Cook were detailed to investigate. They found where the intruders had effected an entrance by removing a screen from one of the bedroom windows. The footprints of a woman were found on a white counterpane on the bed, the bed being against the window.

There was evidence that the woman was not alone. Nothing in the house was molested. Several valuable rings and other jewelry were on one of the bureau. Robbery was evidently not the intent of the parties. The screen removed had been replaced and the intruders left by way of the front door, which had a night latch.

The front door of the rooms occupied by Miss Graham opens on to the front porch, and the front door of the Hutchins apartments standing ajar attracted her attention. She heard no sound during the night.

Miss Graham has had experience with burglars, and she did not enter the Hutchins apartments until after the officers arrived. Her room at a local apartment house was burglarized some time ago, when she lost several valuable articles.

RECEIVES LETTER FROM A BROTHER
FIGHTS IN FRANCE

EL MODENA, July 18.—Mrs. Geo. Wood receives some quite interesting letters from her brother, who is with the Canadian troops somewhere in France.

Seemingly supplied by the Y.M.C.A., the letter heading had the following: “Canadian Y. M. C. A. and Canadian Contingent Association, with the Canadian Contingent on Active Service. Do not mention your rank, battalion or names of places of expected operations, movements or numbers of troops, casualties previous to publication of official lists, or make specific reference to the moral or physical condition of troops.”

Being governed by the above rules he is compelled to omit those things that would be of greatest interest to the home folks.

When relieved from trench duty they are billeted in barns or anywhere available when they can get a little rest, although at times in almost as dangerous a location as when in the trenches.

He arrived in France on February 22, and during March was in the grenade corps, in active service at all times, except when relieved for rest. At one time he was continuously in the trenches for sixteen days. The snow, slush and mud conditions in the trenches earlier in the season made things exceedingly disagreeable.

He states he will be able to sleep comfortably on a clothesline when he gets back. The boys drop to sleep in the mud, hot sunshine, or under any other condition when off duty, which indicates quite strenuous times when on the firing line.

Mrs. Wood is quite relieved to see that none of the Canadian troops were in the recent British drive, and of course hopes, as all sisters do, that her brother may return unharmed.

He gives his address as follows: “Pte. F. G. Hamilton, Grenade Co. 58, 4552443 Batt. C. E. F., British Expeditionary Force, France.”

The outside of the envelope is an equally interesting study, bearing no postage stamp, but being stamped at the “New York, Penn. Terminal Station” with date and “Due 4 Cents.” Each envelope has two hexagonal stamps, one bearing the large letter “T” and the other “Passed, Field Censor 3139.”

Another circular stamp reads “Field Post Office,” date and “9.X.”

These letters are opened by the “Base Censor” and examined before forwarding. Each official envelope bears the following:

“Note:—Correspondence in this envelope need not be censored regimentally. The contents are liable to examination at the Base.”

The following certificate must be signed by the writer:

“I certify on my honor that the contents of this envelope refer to nothing but private and family matters. Signature, name only.”

“F. G. HAMILTON.”

CROP SCARES

The summer rarely passes without several well defined "crop scares" affecting the Wall Street and produce markets. The idea is energetically disseminated, by those who want to buy stocks cheap and sell grain futures high, that climatic conditions are discouraging. The damage by the boll weevil, the grasshopper, the chinch-bug, the red scale, the aphids, the blight, and the army worm, is dwelt upon and exaggerated. The country looks blue and business men curtail ventures.

It should be remembered that these reports are largely circulated by interested parties, who would make money out of a bear movement in stocks or a bull market on soil products. Also there is such a thing as taking the government and other crop reports too seriously. These are worked out with system, and it is quite a triumph to collect and tabulate all this information as well as it is being done. Yet, as nearly 100,000 estimates are being compiled and digested, the chances of error become large.

Many good judges have always said that a large section of these local crop reporters give the government nothing worth having. What is needed is more paid agents having time and skill for making estimates.

While individual errors of judgment may be eliminated in such widespread information, certain temperamental habits count. Probably the farmer's habitual pessimism affects the reports that he sends in. It is proverbial that farmers as a class are apt to find fault with weather conditions and prophesy poor results. Perhaps they unconsciously take this attitude to save themselves disappointment, but it is not the correct point of view for scientific compilation of conditions.

The crops are varied and no general failure is possible. Let no one go into a blue funk merely because speculators are trying to corner the market.

HOW THE JAPANESE BEAT US

An unusually interesting story about the Japanese situation on the Pacific Coast is in the August American Magazine. The writer, Mabel Abbot, describes how a Washington farmer named Sylvester is ousted by his Japanese hired man. In summing up the situation Sylvester says:

"An' the Japs get more work done, too," declared Sylvester, expanding with the unaccustomed sense of endorsement. "A white man'll throw, say, so many sacks of potatoes in a day. At the end of the day somebody's got to cook him a big, expensive meal of meat to keep his strength up for the next day's work. A Jap'll throw more sacks than the white man will, an' then he'll go get him a bucket of rice an' wash it at the pump an' cook it himself."

"The faces around him had darkened."

"That's how they're gettin' the valley into their hands," Wemmick said. "They can outwork us and underlive us. It's a good thing the law doesn't let 'em buy land, only lease it. If they could own land, I guess instead of them workin' for us we'd be workin' for them."

COUNTRY'S GREATEST ASSET

Life insurance experts figure that each young man and woman of good habits and sound physique is an asset to the nation as a producer or conservator of wealth to the amount of $8000. There are in the United States 50,000,000 children and young people under 25 years of age. At $8000 apiece they are an asset of $400,000,000,000. In mere dollars and cents the youth of our nation are worth more than our coal, our iron, our silver, our gold; more than the cattle on a thousand hills; more than the grain from a million fields. And the legalized liquor traffic is the ruthless destroyer of youth. It begins the work of de-

FREE silver was the issue in 1896. William Jennings Bryan was nominated by the Democrats, while William McKinley of Ohio was nominated by the Republicans. While the popular vote was close, McKinley received 271 votes in the electoral college to Bryan's 176. Garret A. Hobart was elected vice president. Other political parties had sprung up by this time, including the Prohibitionists and Socialists.

McKinley was again elected in 1900, defeating Bryan by a vote practically the same as that of 1896. Theodore Roosevelt of New York was elected vice president. McKinley was assassinated about six months after his second inauguration, and Roosevelt served three and one-half years of his second term.

JANET'S HAIR
By Joaquin Miller
Oh, loosen the snood that you wear, Janet,

Let me tangle a hand in your hair, my pet;

For the world to me has no caintier sight

Than your brown hair behind your shoulders white;

I've tangled a hand in your hair, my pet.

It was brown, with a golden gloss, Janet,

It was finer than silk of the floss, my pet;

'Twas a beautiful mist, falling down to your waist;

'Twas a thing to be braided, and jeweled, and kissed;

'Twas the loveliest hair in the world, my pet.

My arm was the arm of a clown, Janet.

It was shewy, bristled and brown, my pet;

But warmly and softly it loved to caress

Your round, white neck, and your wealth of tress,

Your beautiful, plenty of hair, my pet.

Your eyes had a swimming gloss, Janet—

Revealing the dear old story, my pet!

They were grey with that chastened tinge of the sky,

When the trout leaps quickest to snap the fly.

And they matched with your golden hair, my pet.

Your lips—but I have no words, Janet.

They were fresh as the twitter of birds, my pet;

When the Spring is young and the roses are wet

With dew-drops in each red bosom set,

And they suited your golden brown hair, my pet.

Oh! you tangled my life in your hair, Janet!

'Twas a silken and golden snare, my pet;

But so gentle the bondage, my soul did implore

To right to continue a slave evermore,

With my fingers enmeshed in your hair, my pet.

Thus ever I dream that you were, Janet,

With your lips, and your eyes, and your hair, my pet;

In the darkened and desolate years I moan,

And my tears fall bitterly over the stone

That covers your golden hair, my pet.

WINTER AT PASADENA, PLAN OF FAIRBANKS

PASADENA, July 18.—Charles Warren Fairbanks, the Republican candidate for vice president, will spend next winter at one of the hotels in this city. He will come here immediately after the election, whether he is elected or not.

This announcement was made by his son, Frederick C. Fairbanks, of South Pasadena, on his return from the East.

Frederick C. Fairbanks brings back word that business is good, but he believes that there is liable to be a change after the war and says that business men should be prepared for it.

Get Ready For Primary

(Paraphrased, adapted and adopted from the Stockton Record)

There is little doubt that the vast majority of "decline to state" voters, of whom there are nearly 300,000 in the state, are favorable to the candidacy of Hiram W. Johnson for the United States Senate.

At the last primary it was not necessary for a voter to have registered his party preference in order to participate; but, due to a referendum having arrested the operation of the new election law, the old law, which antedated the legislature's last action, now governs. Voters must qualify under the old law, and this means that participation in the primary must be on a partisan basis.

Governor Johnson won his initial victory in this state by winning the gubernatorial nomination in the Republican primary.

He has always insisted on the necessity of activity by the electorate at the primary. The correctness of his judgment is more than ever emphasized now that the people are called upon to make direct nominations for United States senator.

Fortunately for the cause of popular expression and popular government, the law still permits a candidate to place his name before any and all parties. It is possible for him to be the nominee of all parties.

Governor Johnson's name will probably appear on the Progressive, Republican and Democratic ballots.

Those voters who are unprepared to vote for him on the Progressive ballot are free to cast their ballots for him within their own party ranks.

BUT "DECLINES TO STATE" CANNOT VOTE FOR THE GOVERNOR, OR FOR ANYBODY ELSE, AT THE PRIMARY ON ANY BALLOT, UNLESS THEY CHANGE THEIR REGISTRATIONS.

They must go before the county clerk before 5 o'clock July 29th (which is thirty days before the primary election) and amend their registration. The process is simple, being merely the act of signing a brief affidavit.

It is, therefore, important for all friends of the Governor, in all parties, to qualify for the primary.

And it is highly desirable that they do so without delay.

Indeed, every man and woman ought to vote at the primary, regardless of his or her preference.

But as the "decline to state" voters are in the main friends of the Governor, the duty becomes all the more apparent.

IN ORANGE COUNTY ALONE THERE ARE OVER 3000 ELECTORS DISQUALIFIED FOR PARTICIPATION IN THE PRIMARY. THEY CAN QUALIFY BY PROMPTLY GOING BEFORE THE COUNTY CLERK AND DESIGNATE THE PARTY WITH WHICH THEY PROPOSE TO AKA.

Sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of the Governor's candidacy, but it will be futile unless expressed at the polls, and the first opportunity for expression lies at the primary, August 29th.

It is incumbent on the people, and especially the independent and forward-looking electors, to vitalize and organize their voting strength.

Mr. and Mrs. Decline to State, the question is before you. Times flies. The county clerk's office is open.

WHERE OUR CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR STANDS

(EXTRACT FROM GOVERNOR JOHNSON'S LOS ANGELES SPEECH.)

"You, I take it, who sit in front of me today, have been in the past mainly connected with the Progressive party."

"You, I take it, have, during these past years, marched under the glorious banner of progress that has gone forward ever without wavering and without compromise. I am marching under the same banner today, my friends, in the state of California (applause)."

"I am going forward for just the same things that I have gone forward for in the state of California. I recognize, of course, that as a political national entity the Progressive party as a national party has practically ceased to exist. I recognize in the crocodile tears that are shed by some of those who never aided Progressivism in the past and who ever endeavored insidiously to destroy it, that nationally this party that we love, will not, either temporarily or permanently, go forward in the nation, but what these adversaries of ours forget is that the Progressive movement, that glorious thought, and that striving for ideals, that very expression of the democracy, that finally was accorded to our people, that movement is not dead, and can never die. (Great applause.)"

Label Makes No Difference
"It makes no difference under what particular political label you or I in the future shall go on. It makes no difference whether it be of one sort or another; the same striving will be with us, and the same progressive thought, the same patriotic ideals, the same high resolve that we have gone forward with in the past few years. And these gentlemen on the other side need not ever think for one instant that because from tortuous circumstances the Progressive party nationally may have ceased that the Progressive movement, either nationally or in this state, has ceased its existence. (Applause.)"

"And you and I, and all of those throughout this land, who have been under that glorious banner making the fight of the past few years, will continue to fight, perhaps under another name and differently circumstanced, but nevertheless continue exactly the same fight. All the struggle that has been ours cannot cease with the political party or the death of any individual politically."

The Age-Long Struggle
"That which has been in our hearts cannot be stamped out by any political cataclysm, no matter what it may be. It is the age-long struggle, my friends. The age-long struggle that will be present in democracy as long as time shall exist. It is the struggle in homely phrase of property and folks, the struggle by which the material shall give way to the living, breathing sentiment being."

"We would not, of course, affect or disturb property rights in any degree; we would conserve and protect them always, but we recognize wherever there is labor there is a living, sensitive human being—there is a child with a potentiality of future citizenship and women with a potentiality of motherhood and men with a potentiality of fatherhood, and it is for that sort of men and women and children that we have struggled and we have fought and we have gained in the state of California, and under God's providence we will ever strive and go forward for that thing. (Applause.)"

Work Will Not Be Futile
"That is the struggle that in my humble and my feeble way I transfer now—the work being measurably done in the state of California—to the nation's forum and that if one whit of what we have done in the state of California can be done or can be advanced—the work of any individual who undertakes it will not have been wholly in vain. This thought cheers me on to the endeavor that is mine in this particular campaign and that it is which I wish to do if I go into the national forum from the government of the state of California."

"Briefly, my personal platform I present to you. I present it in brief form, because as time passes I will amplify it and will discuss other measures and other things, but these are the things that as a candidate for that particular office for which today I stand."

"I stand just where I stood during the past six years in the state of California and for just what during that period I have stood for. I shall stand in the nation with the same earnestness and emphasis for that for which I stood in our state."

"Were I a United States senator, with such vision as I have governmentally, I will endeavor to help all our people. I shall be from no locality, nor for any particular locality—I will be a Californian for California."

Governor Is for Hughes
"I am, in this campaign, for Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican candidate for president, and to the best of my ability I shall support him. (Applause.)"

"With the view that I entertain respecting Mr. Hughes, if he be elected, and if I am elected to the United States Senate, I should in that body continue that support."

"I stand for a protective tariff. (Cheers and applause.) I believe in adequate protection for our farmers and our horticulturists. The citrus and raisin industries of such value and importance to our state should receive our amplest support and protection."

"I shall endeavor to extend to the nation by federal action what we have given to our state—suffrage for women. (Applause.)"

With Malice Toward None

By Henry James

Painful Possibilities

According to an early report Henry Ford had told his employees that any leaving to join the army would lose his place. A job in the Ford establishment is notoriously worth while. There are thousands of employees. The rumored inhibition might have had serious effect.

Suppose that Mr. Ford had been a citizen of some European country now at war and had taken this attitude! He would have been imprisoned, or shot as a traitor, and his works confiscated.

Thus, even if the gentleman does not believe the United States worth fighting for, he really may have a reason yet to be glad that he is in it.

Needed Coin

There is, talk of minting a twenty-cent piece. Such a coin would not fill any long-felt want apparent here.

If Uncle Sam would turn out a 12½-cent piece, however, it would be appreciated, not only by merchants, but by their customers who now pay fifteen cents for a 12½-cent article, and have almost learned not to grumble about it.

Telling the Truth

There has been no Japanese warship stranded on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

The truth is that such a ship tried to steam up the Colorado river with a view to treating the crew to a glimpse of the Grand Canyon, but that in making a detour of some rapids it got lost and vanished into the desert.

Hopeful

Along the street at fifty miles an hour He drove a motorcycle like a flash; Then saw a man ahead, put on full power,

And frowned to see the man to safety dash.

"Though one I missed," he growled, "no use to fret; I'll catch some guy who isn't agile, yet."

Accounted For

Spread of anti-American feeling in Mexico is not strange.

They have a press down there that glows more brilliantly yellow than a field of poppies.

Geographical

"A large smile flitted over the face of Senator Borah of Nevada," comments an eastern writer.

Hardly likely. But if a smile of this sort flitted over the face of Senator Borah of Idaho, probably its proportions dwindled when he read the comment.

For the information of New York and other benighted regions, it may be said that Nevada and Idaho are different states, several parasangs apart.

Shortage of Material

"Why not give Christianity a trial?" asks G. B. Shaw in relation to settling the war.

Don't know, unless from shortage of Christians.

Concerned for Its Own

Wall street is reported as agitated over the Mexican trouble.

Since that distinguished habitat of the untainted dollar is largely responsible for the trouble in question, its perturbation is natural.

Undoing a Statute

It seems to me that the supreme court easily might have been in better business than knocking the whole-some vitality out of the Harrison anti-drug law. This law had accomplished much good before the court pointed to its error in having done so.

Whether there is any judicial way in which the good so wickedly achieved may be undone does not appear.

Still Trying

Frank A. Munsey has bought the New York Sun.

The gentleman has an expensive habit of buying papers, but seems to lack to an unexampled degree the faculty of conducting them.

However, this purchase represents a growing ambition, the Sun being a more important sheet than Mr. Munsey has yet had the distinction to lead to the jumping-off place.

Its Finish

According to a fashion writer, the short skirt soon may be worn without attracting attention.

Who'll wear it then?

HER LEFT SIDE HURT

—No family remedy enjoys a better reputation among intelligent women than Foley Kidney Pills. Mrs. Laura Beall, Plattsburg, Miss., writes: "Last April I got in bad health; my left side hurt all the time. The doctor's medicine didn't seem to do me any good. I had symptoms of Bright's disease. I took two bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and feel all right now." They quickly relieve backache, rheumatism, aches and pains in a natural way—by driving the poison out of the system. Contain no habit-forming drugs. Rowley Drug Co.—Advertisement.

DOES SLOAN'S LINIMENT HELP RHEUMATISM

Ask the man who uses it; he knows. "To think I suffered all these years when one 25 cent bottle of Sloan's Liniment cured me," writes one grateful user. "If you have Rheumatism or suffer from Neuralgia, Backache, Soreness and Stiffness, don't put off getting a bottle of Sloan's. It will give you such welcome relief. It warms and soothes the sore, stiff, painful places and you feel so much better. Buy it at any drug store, only 25 cents."

INITIATED SIX

Hermosa Chapter, Eastern Star Has Impressive Services Past Matrons Officers

A very delightful meeting of Hermosa Chapter, Eastern Star, was held last evening in Masonic Temple, more than one hundred, including a number of visitors, being present to enjoy the occasion. Beautiful pink hydrangeas were used to decorate the hall.

The Past Matrons occupied the chairs, during the initiatory services, an interesting class of six being inducted into the mysteries of the order. The candidates were Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Patterson, Mrs. Smart of Balboa and Mrs. Ada Watkins.

Those occupying the chairs were Mrs. Maude Bowes of Hollywood, Acting Worthy Matron; Mrs. Lucetta Crawford, Associate Matron; Prof. J. W. McCormac, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Lida Huntington, Secretary; Mrs. U. D. Palmer, Treasurer; Mrs. Cora B. Cavins, Conductress; Mrs. Theo. Winbigler, Associate Conductress; Mrs. C. S. Duple, Chaplain; Mrs. Max Reinhaus, Marshal; Mrs. J. Evans, Warder; Mrs. Perry, Organist; Mrs. W. D. Barker, Ada; Mrs. W. H. Thomas, Ruth; Mrs. O. M. Robbins, Esther; Mrs. P. L. Tople, Martha, and Mrs. Norton of Long Beach, Electa.

The Past Matrons put on the work in an excellent manner and received many compliments. A spirit of happiness and harmony prevailed throughout the evening, which proved most delightful.

Following the ceremonies, the Worthy Matron, Miss Martha Whitson, called upon several visitors and the candidates for remarks, all briefly responding.

Adjournment was then taken to the banquet room upstairs, where delicious refreshments of fruitade and wafers were served and a social hour passed.

W. C. T. U. EXECUTIVE

Interesting Meeting Planned for July 21 at Huntington Beach

The Orange County W. C. T. U. executive meeting will be held in Huntington Beach on Friday, July 21, in the Methodist church at 10 o'clock. An excellent program has been arranged. The morning session will be devoted to business and reports. Mrs. E. J. Blair, the state L. T. L. superintendent and organizer of young campaigners, will be present and speak to the unions on the importance of this work.

Lunch will be served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church. Mrs. Belle Rogers, county W. C. T. U. president, will preside. The institute will open at 1:30 with the following program:

Devotional service by Mrs. Nellie Winslow; address, "The Glory of Womanhood," by Rev. F. G. Watson, pastor of Richland Avenue Methodist church; music furnished by Huntington Beach Union.

A campaign school will be conducted by the young people of Huntington Beach. This promises to be very amusing as well as instructive. Solo, by Mrs. Theo. Winbigler, Santa Ana. The closing address will be given by Rev. R. J. Coyne, pastor of the Christian church of Huntington Beach, on "Campaign Outlook." Every one interested in the temperance work is invited.

It is said that a good story will bear repeating, so for fear there may be some one in Santa Ana who has not heard the "twice told tale" of how a bountiful chicken dinner is going to be served tomorrow at G. A. R. hall on East Fourth street, near French. It is repeated. This dinner is for the relief of some families of the boys of Company L.

The people have quite generously responded to most of the demands, but a few more chickens will be most thankfully received even as late as Wednesday morning if delivered at G. A. R. hall. This excellent dinner will be served from 11:30 a. m. to 3 p. m. by the Daughters of Veterans, Ladies of the G. A. R. and Woman's Relief Corps. Price only 35 cents.

Donations of fruit, especially lemons, for our Club Woman's punch, will be gratefully appreciated, at G. A. R. hall today or tomorrow morning.

Fruit and flowers can be taken to G. A. R. hall early tomorrow morning or this afternoon.

Visitors in the city are cordially invited to the dinner in G. A. R. hall tomorrow.

THANKS LETTER SENT BY CAPTAIN McBRIDE
The following letter was received today by Mrs. L. A. Schlesinger: COMPANY L Seventh California Infantry United States Volunteers Camp Stephen Little, Nogales, Ariz., July 14, 1916.

Mrs. L. A. Schlesinger, Santa Ana, California.
Dear Madame: I am enclosing herewith the list of members with the addresses of their families. I am very sorry indeed that this list has been so delayed, but the stress of camp duties and the work incident to the equipping the men has made this delay unavoidable.

I think that you and the ladies associated with you appreciate how much your work means to the men of this company. There are several men who, if it had not been for you, would have had a very hard time of it thinking of the dear ones at home, but as it is, they realize that they are being taken care of and their thanks are your reward.

Yours respectfully,
J. L. McBRIDE,
Captain Co. L, Seventh Infantry California Militia.

INTERCHANGE TICKETS POPULAR WITH PUBLIC
The interchange of tickets by the Pacific Electric and Southern Pacific is proving a great convenience to travelers to and from points beyond Los Angeles.

Under the arrangement parties having tickets for points on the Southern Pacific beyond Los Angeles can go from here to Los Angeles and make close connections, avoiding long delays at the S. P. station in Los Angeles. Ticket holders coming into Santa Ana also avoid long waits.

CONSTABLE THINKS NO DESECRATION MEANT
The attention of Constable Frank Heard was called to the remnants of seven or eight flags found in the alley back of G. A. Edgar's store. The flags had been partly burned and bore the evidences of having been blackened with oil. While he could not find out where the flags came from, the constable is satisfied that no desecration was intended. He thinks the flags were damaged in some store, and were thrown away as rubbish, and possibly were found by boys, many of whom make a practice of searching rubbish barrels.

INSURRECTION IN THE RANKS OF DEMOCRATS

Flurry Caused When Culp Got Nomination Papers for Central Committee

Mystery, deep and unfathomable, surrounds the taking out of nomination papers for Democratic County Central committee by L. O. Culp, insurance man with an office in the Spurgeon building.

For a time it looked as though there was going to be a disturbance in the commissioned circles of the Democratic hosts. The rattle of musketry was at hand. The word "Fire" was not given, and the sounds of warlike maneuvers have turned out to be about as real as Funston's recent march to Mexico City. Instead of a dynamite bomb, the Democrats discovered a tomato can. At least, it was no more harmful than a tomato can. There was no explosion. Somebody poured water on the fuse.

Last Saturday there was a meeting of the Democratic County Central Committee. At that meeting it was decided to run all of the members of the present County Central Committee for reelection. A few changes had to be made, but in the main it was the same committee.

It was decided to have H. C. Head, J. H. Cochran, B. E. Tarver, Walter Greenleaf, E. F. Waite, Paul E. Wright and G. A. Edgar continue to represent Santa Ana.

Culp Gets Papers
Yesterday L. O. Culp, formerly of Anaheim, went to the clerk's office and asked for blanks for nominating Democratic Central committee. County Clerk Williams did not want to send out a double set of papers for the same nominees, and in the hope of clarifying the situation he asked the simple question: "Are you cooperating with H. C. Head? Petitions have been taken out already for the ticket put up by the central committee."

"It is not the same bunch," said Culp. Williams handed him the papers, and he left.

Local Democrats wondered what kind of an insurrection had started. This morning John Carlyle undertook the discovery of the nigger in the woodpile. He went straight to Culp, and Culp right off the bat told Carlyle it wasn't Culp. Culp said he had nothing to do with whatever was proposed to be done, but he had acted at the request of some friends who were talking of making some nominations. They did not have time to get the papers, and he merely took time off to go to the court house to get the papers. He had the papers, but they had not been started abroad.

Oil Is Poured
The Register had been trying to get an interview with Culp, and in response to that endeavor, Culp gave the information that things had evidently quieted down. John Carlyle or somebody else had poured oil on the troubled waters, or something had happened. Anyhow, Culp said he did not know for publication what the trouble was all about, and he understood that there really was not going to be any opposition ticket after all.

Carlyle said he had not been able to get at the bottom of the mystery. There was something doing somewhere, but what that something was or where that somewhere had its geographical center is buried under a ton of crushed rock and oil.

Some might guess that it might have come from Anaheim. Culp used to live over there. It is just possible that some of the friends of Thomas Crawford, who lives at Anaheim, wanted to get Democratic County Central committee members who would endorse Crawford as a candidate for the Assembly. Possibly they wanted to make sure that committee members would be elected who would not endorse Joe Burke. Possibly, again, the assemblyman situation did not enter into the conflagration at all.

Who knows? If he knows, he won't tell—that is, not for publication.

BORDWELL FIRM IN REFUSAL TO QUIT RACE

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—Former Judge Walter Bordwell, president of the Board of Education, is going to make the race for United States senator at the nominating primaries next month, as a "standpat" Republican.

He declines to withdraw from the three-cornered fight at the request of the Republican presidential campaign committee. The judge turns a deaf ear to hundreds of letters and telegrams and telephone calls from other "regulars," who begged him to withdraw "in the interests of the party."

In a letter to Captain John D. Fredericks, which he gave out last night, the judge declares that the committee has no legal right to ask him to withdraw, contending its functions ceased when it concluded its work relative to the National convention at Chicago.

He dismisses the personal appeals to withdraw with the statement, in effect, that he considers himself the only regular Republican in the race, and as a citizen, with a possibility of election, has a right to run.

When W. H. Booth, also Republican senatorial candidate, was informed of Judge Bordwell's determination last night, he refused positively to make any comment.

AT THE COURTHOUSE GETTING SIGNERS FOR NOMINATION PETITIONS HERE

CHIROPRACTOR, JAILED 90 DAYS, IS RELEASED

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—Dr. T. F. Ratledge, the chiropractor who has served ninety days in jail for the cause of his profession, last night was freed. As the prison doors opened, his wife rushed into his arms. And there went up a cheer for there also to welcome him was a large delegation of chiropractors. They bore him away in an automobile and made him guest of honor at a banquet in the early morning hours at Christopher's.

Said Dr. Ratledge:
"My jail sentence has shown to the people of California, I believe, what justice is possible under the medical law, not only to us chiropractors, but to the people themselves. They charged me with practicing medicine without a license. I never practiced medicine, but I did practice my profession and I shall continue to do so."

TO USE ONLY UNION LABOR AT MOOSEHEART

MOOSEHEART, Ill., July 18.—Rather than save a few dollars at the expense of the workingman the Loyal Order of Moose, gathered for its international convention here, voted to employ nothing but union labor in the building of their immense industrial and agricultural school.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago and Frank O. Lowden of Oregon, Ill., welcomed the delegates to Mooseheart and Charles A. McGee of San Diego Cal., made the response. Supreme Director E. J. Henning of San Diego presided.

1 SLAIN, 1 FATALLY HURT IN L. A. SHOOTING

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—An attempted murder and a suicide, enacted yesterday in a dingy little room of an Italian hotel, were worked into the closing chapter of a romance which had its beginning in Italy many years ago. The principals in the tragedy were Angela Bertone, recently compelled to leave her husband and two small children in San Francisco, and Primo Cerbari who, after stealing the woman from her home, endeavored to slap her when she refused to support him through life of shame. Cerbari is dead from a bullet fired by his own hand; Angela Bertone lies at the receiving hospital suffering from a dangerous wound near her left temple. It was Cerbari by whom both shots were fired.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS PROPERTY REVERTS TO FORD, COUNTY TO GIVE THE DEED

Money Is Given Today for the Purchase of Ten El Camino Real Bells

The county is to deed to George W. and Theodore Ford a piece of property on the Anaheim boulevard north of the Ford place. Years ago the ground, a small piece, was deeded to the county as a site for a pumping plant. In those days the street was sprinkled. It is now paved, and the place is no longer used for a pumping plant. In the deed there was a clause that when the county quit using the place for a pumping plant, the property would revert to the Fords. A deed turning the land back to Ford has been prepared.

Fumigators' Licenses
Today fumigators' licenses were issued by the Board of Supervisors to M. Elisalida, D. C. Trujillo, R. Gastelum, Leo Palacios, E. G. Waidler and R. E. Coffman of Anaheim, and Elmer Yordy and J. B. Robertson of the McPherson Citrus Growers' Association.

For Roadside Bells
Today the Board of Supervisors appropriated $375 from the advertising fund to be used for the purchase of ten El Camino Real bells to be placed in this county by the El Camino Real Association.

IN THE JUSTICE COURT FOR BOOZE SELLING SHE IS TO BE TRIED

Assistant Cashier of Long Beach Bank Pays $20 for Speeding His Auto

This morning Mrs. Cupriano Gonzales of Delhi was ordered held for trial in the superior court on a charge of selling liquor in no-license territory. A few minutes later, she was again ordered held.

Sheriff Jackson and Deputy District Attorney Koepsel presented two cases against the woman, and upon each she is to appear in the superior court. She is ready to plead guilty.

It Cost Him $20
It cost C. H. Tucker of Long Beach $20 to try to pass an automobile on the state highway. It will cost the other machine driver $20, also. Tucker had an attorney with him. They asked for clemency.

"There is no clemency in this court to speeders," declared the judge. "But this is an exceptional case," said the attorney. "Mr. Tucker is a prominent church member at Long Beach. He had tried three times to get by this other machine, and it would not let him pass."

"None between the pearly gates of the new Jerusalem and the hot sands of Yuma gets by in this court, for speeding," said Cox. "The officers say you were going forty-five miles an hour. Your fine is $20." Tucker paid. Tucker is assistant cashier of a Long Beach bank.

COFFROTH AND AIDE NEAR DEATH IN SEA

SAN DIEGO, July 18.—James W. Coffroth, president of the Lower California Jockey Club at Tia Juana, and Keegan Monahan, his partner, narrowly escaped death by drowning at Ocean Beach. Walter M. Fields, life guard, plunged into the surf and swam to where Coffroth was battling feebly with the waves, and after considerable effort brought the exhausted man to shore. Later Fields rescued Monahan. Neither of the rescued men are expected to suffer serious results.

1 KILLED, 2 WOUNDED IN SEATTLE BAR RAID

SEATTLE, Wash., July 18.—William Bothwell, former Seattle city controller, and recently a special officer on the waterfront, was killed and W. W. Morris and C. V. Harvey, members of the Prohibition Enforcement squad of the Seattle police force, were wounded in a pistol fight which resulted from a raid on the Ferguson bar, in the Ferguson Hotel, here. Morris was shot through the shoulder and Harvey through the arm. Both men are expected to recover.

NOTIFICATION DATE POSTPONED BY WILSON

WASHINGTON, July 18.—President Wilson decided to change the tentative plans for holding the notification ceremonies August 5, because he desired to postpone them until after the adjournment of Congress.

The decision was announced by Vance McCormick, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who said the President thought he should not turn to politics until the business of this Congressional session was over.

BUSINESS SESSION IS RUSHED BY ROTARIANS

CINCINNATI, July 18.—Five thousand Rotarians, attending the seventh annual international convention here, rushed through the short business session and quickly began to go through a lively program of entertainment. Governor Willis of Ohio, Mayor Puchta of Cincinnati and Allen D. Albert of Minneapolis, international president, welcomed the visitors.

After responses, departmental discussions occurred.

SPEAKERS URGE NOBLER CITIZENSHIP IDEALS

BANQUET MARKED BY STIRRING APPEALS TO NEW AMERICANS

OBLIGATION OF THE CITIZEN IS LOYALTY, HOLDS BAUMGARTNER

Clearly Points Out Dignity of Citizenship of America

Superior Judge W. H. Thomas

One of the most interesting features of the "Naturalization Day" exercises held yesterday under the supervision of Superior Judge W. H. Thomas, was the luncheon held at Elks' Hall at 12:30, following the admission to citizenship by Judge Thomas of six applicants. Almost 100 people, including many who have been admitted to citizenship in the past few years, sat down to the tables, where a splendid meal was served by the ladies of the First Christian church. Before the company was seated a blessing was invoked by Rev. R. J. Coyne of Huntington Beach.

In opening the program, following the luncheon, Judge Thomas said that while in a sense the ceremonies of the day were court proceedings, they had a deeper and wider significance—the beginning of a new era for those who had on that day renounced one allegiance and taken another. Such an undertaking should, he thought, be inaugurated by an appeal to heaven, and he accordingly called on Rev. Otto S. Russell to deliver the invocation. In welcoming the new citizens Judge Thomas called attention to some of the answers which had been given in the examination of the morning, and said that it made one feel there must be something great and noble in our country and its ideals when it made men give such answers as he had received to the very searching questions which the applicants were compelled to answer.

Making Good Americans

Judge Thomas first introduced Frank P. Clarkson, editor of The Evening Blade, who was asked to give the salutation. Mr. Clarkson said in part:

"I feel that in addressing these whom we have today taken into our national brotherhood, that I am addressing the great nations from which they come; that I have the opportunity of sending to them the message that here in this glorious country there is a place for all who come with clean hearts and with clean hands; for all who are willing to assume with the privileges of citizenship its responsibilities.

"The problem of the handling of new citizens is one of the greatest sociological questions of the day. I am satisfied that gatherings of the character of this present one are bound to produce the best thoughts on the subject. It has seemed to me that in the past it has been our fault that we have given too little attention to the education and cultivation of our alien-born citizens. We have admitted them to citizenship and then apparently forgotten them, and that they have become good citizens is more a tribute to their own worthiness than to our efforts or our institutions. To those who are today new-made Americans I would say that they should not only endeavor to learn American standards, but should incorporate them in their families; should not only adopt us as their nation, but adopt our ways, to the end that they become Americans in fact as well as in name."

Mrs. Margaret C. Gehrett was down on the program for a vocal solo, but was incapacitated through a severe cold. In a very graceful introduction Judge Thomas announced that Mr. Harry Garstang would take her place. Mr. Garstang sang "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," with Mrs. Gehrett at the piano. Later he sang Kipling's "Recessional."

Citizenship and Government

In introducing Rev. J. A. Stevenson Judge Thomas said, "This is the one man in Santa Ana to whom I am absolutely loyal. I hear him every Sunday that he is in Santa Ana, and preaches, and I have never had too much of him, although I get six feet and some odd inches every Sunday. Mr. Stevenson's subject was 'Citizenship and Government.'" He said:

"Judge Thomas, you are to be congratulated today upon your success in the noble art of cultivating good citizenship. You, gentlemen who are now naturalized citizens of our country, are to be congratulated upon your entrance upon the privileges and responsibilities that are now yours. We are to be congratulated upon the fresh blood and sturdy spirit and indomitable purpose that has led you into new fields, and relationships.

"It is wise for us to pause a moment and bid our minds contemplate the relationships that a worthy citizen must maintain toward his government. A worthy citizen has a right to the protection of his government. He ought to feel that the flag of his country affords him the best possible protection. In like manner the State has a right to the best possible support of the citizen. The worthy citizen wants, not only to receive the best that the State can give him, but he wants to contribute his best to the welfare of the State. He must look upon his government, not as affording an opportunity for roast pork, but as constituting an appeal to self-sacrificing patriotism. The wise citizen looks upon his State, not as an organization apart from himself, a power that is over him, but as an expression of himself. For the State can never be and character of her citizens.

Characteristics

"There are two distinctive characteristics of which I want to speak. Intelligence and integrity.

"The foundations of a monarchy may be laid in ignorance and authority, but the corner stone of a democracy must be intelligence. A people that is not capable of sustaining an accurate thought can never adequately handle the large problems of human government. The school-house and the printing press are absolutely essential to free government. We must have a people that can read and think and a press that cannot be subsidized. The true citizen, then, must strive to belong to the aristocracy of intelligence. He must feed his mind so that he shall be able to take an intelligent part in the activities of the State.

"Integrity calls for industry. The worthy citizen is a working citizen. A free country never means a country in which one has a right to be an idler. The idle poor and the idle rich constitute two great menaces to our State. The law of God still holds good in every country, that a man, a real man must earn his bread by the sweat of his face. Plain, common, everyday honesty. Honest weight, honest measure, honest judgments, an honest day's labor for a day's pay and a full day's pay for an honest day's labor.

"Law-abiding freedom is never anarchy. The man that does not reverence the flag has no right to abide under it. One citizen's rights stop where another's begin. Every citizen has the right, the privilege, of staying within the limits of the law and according to every other citizen the most kindly and courteous consideration.

Law-Supporting

"The worthy citizen will not only live under the flag but he will uphold the flag. He may not be called upon to die for it but he, most certainly, is called upon to live for it. He must not only have sufficient education to vote intelligently but he must have the character to vote righteously. If he will not vote, if he is a stay-at-home on election day he ought to be deprived of his citizenship. He must be willing to sacrifice for the common good of his fellow-man and by way of that sacrifice find the highest happiness and greatest usefulness.

"I am wishing for each of you today that in this new State you may find the best that it is possible for the citizen of any country to find, that you may be the best that it is possible for man to be and that you may be wise and zealous in propagating the best things in life for your fellow-men."

Loyalty to the Law

Attorney S. M. Davis had for his subject "Citizenship and Law." "Law is a large factor in every phase of American life," said Mr. Davis. "This Republic is a great democracy—a government by the people, and to each and every one of us belongs the duty of supporting the law. It is a personal duty. We have with us an officer of the government whose duty it is to enforce the law. You should remember that while this man has been invested with a certain power he is your servant, but it is your duty to stand behind him at all times.

"It is often said, and with too much truth, that the laws are made by the lawyers. I, for one, would like to see in the legislatures of the land the lawyers represented in just the proportion they are here today—that is, one out of many. I would like to see many more laymen in our legislative bodies. Let the lawyers operate the laws, but let the people make them. If such were the case there might be less complaint about the law's weakness and the law's delays. It is a melancholy fact that the United States leads the world in the number of murders in proportion to population. This is because a criminal trial has become not so much an effort to learn whether or not the accused is really guilty, as a game between lawyers in which the principal effort is to throw errors into the record so as to admit of an appeal. It is your duty, by taking a more active part in the affairs of government, to change this condition.

"Don't avoid your duty as citizens. Don't dodge jury duty when you are called on. Don't dodge the other responsibilities which all good citizens willingly assume. It has been asked, 'How long will this Republic last?' I say to you that it will last so long as the principles which the Fathers wrought into the foundations of the government remain alive in the hearts of their sons. And may this condition be eternal."

The Ministerial View

In introducing Father H. Eumelen, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church, Judge Thomas took occasion to pay tribute to the ministers of the city for the assistance they have given him in juvenile and probationary work, and spoke especially of the broad spirit of Father Eumelen. The latter's subject was "Citizenship and Religion," and he said in part:

"Judge Thomas has invented a new way to make men—a new way to make people appreciate their country. He has raised the standard of citizenship, and he has created new

Flags Are Presented to Six New-Made Americans

Following his address to the newly-made citizens, Judge Thomas presented each of them with a flag.

Impressively each flag was received. The judge, in handing the Stars and Stripes to those who this day swore allegiance to the United States, said:

"When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her banner to the air
She tore the azure robe of night
And placed the Stars of Glory there."

"Its stripes of red eternal dyed
In the heartstreams of all lands;
Its white, its snow-capped hills
That lift in storm their upraised hands;
Its blue old ocean's waves
That beat 'round Freedom's circled shore;
Its stars the print of angel's feet
That gleam forevermore."

"My dear fellow-citizens:—So long as by the suffrage of the good people of this country I am permitted to remain a judge of the Superior Court, our national flag shall have a post of honor in my court. I now present you with an emblem that typifies and symbolizes all of the high ideals that I have been talking to you about this day. Please receive this silk flag from me as a token of my esteem and as a reminder to you that on this day the highest honor that is in my power to bestow upon you has been conferred.

"Let its white remind you of the purity of intentions and cleanness of life that should always actuate every citizen of this great Republic. Its red symbolizes the sacrifice of human blood freely poured out on many a battlefield and 'The ocean's uncharted ways' that you and I might enjoy today, untrammelled, the blessings of civil and religious freedom. Its blue typifies the starbedecked vault of heaven, upbore above us all, reminding us that however widely we may be dispersed on land and sea, we cannot stray beyond our Father's loving care.

"My friends, you are now enlisted under a great and glorious banner. It symbolizes Sacrifice and Service; Courage and Devotion; Loyalty and Patriotism. Follow with all your strength the ideals exemplified by this grand old flag, ordained in heaven and baptized in blood, and in due season, when this mortal shall have put on immortality, you shall receive the reward of the faithful."

AMERICAN LIFE RAFT SAVES 12 FROM DEATH SHIP OF KITCHENER

LONDON, July 18.—It was an American life raft which saved the twelve men of the cruiser Hampshire on which Lord Kitchener met his fate near the Orkneys recently.

The twelve survivors reached the coast clinging to the big cork-canvas device, which resembles a sausage-shaped life buoy, though fifty times larger. The furious storm raging off the rock-bound coast smashed the four boats seen to leave the war vessel almost as soon as they put off. One of these, according to advices from Kirkwall, contained Lord Kitchener and his staff.

Before the war the British admiralty purchased great quantities of the newly invented American life rafts, and fitted them to the superstructure of practically every British warship. During the long lull which preceded the great naval battle off Jutland, the British sailors on calm days used the rafts for racing. Picked crews from a dozen ships launched the rafts once a week and paddled over a given distance.

The life rafts are unsinkable and almost indestructible, and are extremely buoyant. These facts explain why any of the Hampshire's complement lived to tell the tale.

A FEARLESS PHYSICIAN

Such a physician recently remarked: "The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it contains the very elements needed to tone up the female system and strengthen the depleted organism." Of course that is so, otherwise it could not succeed as it has.—Advertisement.

FOR SUMMER TROUBLES

—Hay fever afflicts thousands and asthma sufferers endure torture. Foley's Honey and Tar gives relief, for it allays inflammation and clears the air passages. It eases the terrible, gasping cough and soothes the membranes rasped by constant efforts to check irritating disturbances. This wholesome family remedy contains no opiates and a bottle lasts a long time.

"The Obligation of Citizenship" was the subject dealt with by J. P. Baumgartner, editor of the Register, in the closing address at the Naturalization Day banquet. He said:

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations, may she always be right; but our country, right or wrong!"

"Those sentiments were expressed by Stephen Decatur, in a toast given at Norfolk, Va., in April 1816.

"They sound highly patriotic, but I do not unreservedly subscribe to them.

"I like much better the sentiments expressed by a citizen of the Roman Republic, Cicero (or if you prefer, Kikero) by name, who said in one of his great orations:

"Patria est communis omnium parens." (Our country is the common parent of all.)

"The true patriotism of today should mean to keep faith with all that is highest and best in our own country, together with the best of feeling for all other nations.

"We have stood for Liberty, Justice and Democracy. That we have not reached the fullness of these ideals does not mean that we have failed. We stand today looking forward toward the achievement of all three in their highest forms. In holding to these ideals we have been able to receive the millions and millions of people from all countries, and with some measure of success to incorporate them into our body social and politic.

"But are we doing this in the best possible way, and to the fullest possible extent?"

"And are those who are coming to us from foreign countries doing all in their power to become quickly the best possible citizens of the United States?"

"My answer to both these questions is, no.

"While naturally affording to immigrants great industrial and civic opportunities, compared with conditions in their native lands, this country has sadly neglected its own opportunity to help and hasten them toward good citizenship and fair living conditions. Such help is absolutely necessary for the protection of our body politic, and is justly demanded by individual and national ethics.

A Crying Need

"While many of the immigrants of the class to which our guests of today belong are highly educated, and nearly all of them have the foundation of an education, this is not true of the great mass of immigrants. Therefore education of our foreign population is the crying need of the hour, and it is encouraging to note that it is receiving considerable attention from the Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor and that public school authorities are co-operating with the department in many sections of the United States.

"In approximately 650 cities and towns, located in forty-five states of the Union, the public school authorities, in co-operation with the Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor, have established evening schools for the instruction of their foreign-born population. In all of these cities and towns the intention is to re-open the night schools at the beginning of the fall term. Advices have been received from other places where, for one reason or another, they have as yet been unable to join in this movement, that the public school authorities have determined to open night schools for alien instruction at the beginning of the next scholastic year.

"Great results have already been accomplished and greater are expected. The Bureau of Naturalization, since the first of October has sent the names of approximately 200,000 candidates for citizenship and their wives to the public authorities of the country. It has also sent personal letters to all of these to induce them to enter the public schools. It has prepared an outline course in citizenship, thousands of copies of which have been sent to public school teachers. It has also prepared a syllabus of the naturalization law, which it has sent out, with copies of preliminary naturalization forms, to aid teachers in the instruction of candidates for citizenship.

"It seems timely to urge all foreign-born men and women to seek the advantages thus afforded, and to bespeak on their behalf the fullest and heartiest co-operation of our schools and public officials.

"I was greatly impressed with the breadth and clarity, the world-wide grasp, the sincere human brotherhood, of some views expressed in a Fourth of July interview given the San Francisco Bulletin by Roscoe R. Hill, professor of history in the University of New Mexico, who is lecturing at the University of California summer school, at the request of the American Association of International Conciliators. Let me quote briefly:

Mutual Understanding

"Independence Day is a good day to take stock of our achievements and consider the concepts of a free human fraternity, for which our country has stood. Today we should look forward to better international relationships. The doctrine of Christianity has not been carried out to the fullest ex-elsewhere. Individuals have been organized into society for their own protection and preservation, but, as yet, the complete organization of nations into peaceable society has not been accomplished. In order to complete the steps of what has been achieved in the way of international relations there must be a mutual knowledge and understanding. We are too often so provincial that we cannot see the other side of the story at all. We can see the enjoyment in a football game, but we look with horror upon a Mexican bull fight. We do not realize that the Latin-American nation views our sport with an equal disgust.

"Each nation contributes something to the world which it has worked out. Just as the thing the United States has stood for has been justice and liberty, so Spain's great genius as a colonizing race is something which should be the pride of the world.

"Germany's scientific achievements, England's commercial power, the liberty and equality of France, each has something which can best be preserved for the race through nationalism.

"The basis for developing the new type of internationalism is through education. Especially should we study the Latin-American countries from a sympathetic viewpoint. We should study them from their own as well as our own viewpoint, until we reach an understanding, not only of their active life, but of their motives and impulses. This study of one another will lead to a community of feeling, especially with Latin America. Especially with Latin America will we have to play the leading role in international arbitration and world peace."

Deadly Civic Poison

"Of course this occasion does not permit of an extended discussion of the tremendously big and vitally important problems involved in the national and individual relations between countries and peoples with respect to immigration and citizenship. But in passing, I want to touch briefly upon one phase of the attitude of both native-born and naturalized citizens toward our common country. Of course we are the country, but as individuals we are not, and perhaps rightly, think and speak of our country, our government, as a thing apart—and the national conscience and spirit is a thing apart from the individual conscience and spirit.

"In the July number of Scribner's there is a story (fiction, of course) in which a young naval officer, under the influence of hashish, makes a Fourth of July speech in which he says:

"Anybody who'll stop and think will know that all this intensive enthusiasm about G. Washington and our country is the colossal joke of history. G. Washington was a good old top and a Briton, and that's why he had the sand in his gizzard to kick up a row. He caught England when her hands were tied with France and Spain, and he shipped her with a few ragtags and bobtails, who thereafter made a high-sounding composition and called themselves a nation! For the love of the board of health! Think about that! We were a handful of colonists and we're just a bigger handful now. What about a land where whole communities—political parties—of foreigners speak, read newspapers in a foreign tongue, live with foreign customs? That's us! Is that a nation? Could there be an Italian party in France, do you think? Can you picture a Russian party in Germany? There's no common blood, no inheritance, no history.

"They call us the melting-pot of the nations. More like a rubbish heap, we're a crazy-quilt, a hash, an historic witticism. There's no such thing as an American nation. I'm no American—I'm an Englishman five times removed, and I've got the ginger to stand up and say it. I've got the truthfulness to own that the flag yonder means nothing to me, and I've got the courage to—"

"Well, he threw a glass of burgundy at the flag—so the story goes.

"Now as I have said, this was fiction, and even in fiction the young officer had to be doped with hashish before the author would dare permit him to express such sentiments.

A Danger

"But there is no doubt in the world, ladies and gentlemen, that sentiments akin to these are entertained, if not expressed, by some of our native-born citizens, and that such sentiments are both entertained and expressed by a good many of our naturalized citizens.

"And the horrible part of it is, that there is just enough truth in the arraignment to make it a deadly civic poison;—not enough to justify it, of course,—it is absolutely unjustifiable,—but the national weakness is there just the same.

"Listen to this paragraph from a Los Angeles syndicate writer:

"Not long ago I saw many thousands of men in a preparedness parade. They represented every class of Americans from the humble laborer with no tool but his hands, to the capitalist accustomed to dealing in millions. A large proportion were of military age and apparent fitness.

"Enthusiasm was evident. The marchers sang as they went, waving

Rights, Privileges, Discussed in Open Court by Superior Judge

RAPS THE SALOONS ON 'PERSONAL LIBERTY'

For Development Along the Proper Line in Working Out Great Problem

Yesterday morning, following the critical examination of the applicants for citizenship, and following the discussion of the judge admitting to citizenship those who had successfully stood the tests, Judge W. H. Thomas delivered to the new citizens an address that could not have failed in its object—the portrayal of the dignity of American citizenship.

"It is with unalloyed pleasure that I address you this day as fellow citizens," said Judge Thomas. "Now you come, and a part and parcel of this great Government. I feel that the satisfaction which I entertain on this very important occasion is excelled only by the great heart throbs of joy which you must experience now that you know that you are a citizen of the greatest Republic on earth, and of the best government that Almighty God has caused to be brought into existence thus far.

"Intaking the oath of allegiance you have called upon God to help you to keep it. My prayer is that He may always guide you and keep you as His very own.

"To my mind the thing that you have done this day—the absolute renunciation of all allegiance to the countries or powers from whence you came, and the assumption of allegiance to the great Government of the United States of America—is one of the most important transactions that you have or ever will perform.

Rights—Privileges

"Under God, being myself an adopted citizen of this country, like yourselves having been born on the other side of the sea, it is my consuming desire to impress upon you, and each of you, in the strongest possible manner known to me, the fact that because of the allegiance which you have this day sworn to this government, and bear in mind that you have done so voluntarily, you are entitled to certain rights and privileges as citizens of this Republic.

"That you, and each of you, must bear in mind that you must, also, assume the duties and responsibilities that such rights and privileges impose.

"By the authority in me vested, as Judge of the Superior Court of the State of California, under and by virtue of the laws of the United States, I have conferred upon you the highest honor in my power to bestow. You cannot be insensible of the obligations which devolve upon you. The honor, reputation, usefulness and even the perpetuity of our great Nation rests in a degree much larger than you now, perhaps, realize, upon you.

"It is now your duty as well as privilege to spread and communicate light and instruction as to what it means to be a citizen of so great a country. Impress upon all by your daily walk and conversation the dignity and high importance of citizenship here. Seriously admonish all to so conduct themselves as to bring no disgrace upon themselves or reproach upon the Government under whose flag you are now enlisted.

"By amiable, discreet and virtuous conduct endeavor to convince all of the goodness and greatness of our institutions, so that, when anyone is said to be an American, the world may know that he is one to whom the burdened heart may pour out its sorrows; to whom distress may press its suit; whose hand is guided by justice and his heart expanded by benevolence. In short, let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in Heaven." Let me suggest further that by a diligent observance of our laws—fundamental and statutory—you will be able to acquire yourselves with honor and reputation which shall continue when time shall be no more.

Responsibilities

"Somewhat, something tells me today that our government will be stronger and better and our community enriched immensely because you, and each of you, are now one of us. I trust that under God that you will have but one aim, that of making yourselves a power for righteousness in this country.

"I feel it unnecessary to advise you that these duties and responsibilities, which as I have already said you have voluntarily assumed, are not simply external ones of obedience to the letter of the law, the willingness, even the cheerful enlistment in case of necessity for the defense of our country and its institutions even to the extent, if the occasion requires it, of laying down your lives that our country might live. Something more than that is required of every one of us. Something more intimate, something that is of daily occurrence, something that means so much more than appears to the outward vision.

"The principles which the Federal Constitution and our system of government were established and organized to preserve are the principles of the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness without distinction as between our citizens based upon any consideration of race, or creed or former nationality. Concededly this means the right, not merely to exist, but to live, and to live according to some ideal of what life constitutes and what it promises. It means also that liberty in living such a life which is coupled with justice as between man and man so that the liberty to enjoy may be exercised with scrupulous regard to the enjoyment of like liberty by others.

Personal Liberty

"We hear a great deal these days about 'personal liberty.' Those from whom we hear it most appear to know the least about what that phrase means. To them 'personal liberty' means to do what they desire, whether it deprives anyone else of any right or not. The fact is, however, that their personal liberty ends where your personal liberty begins. The institution which has done most to put the phrase 'personal liberty' on the market—the liquor traffic—is the greatest handicap that this great Republic has; and it is also God's worst enemy. The part of the organized liquor traffic with which perhaps we are most familiar is the saloon.

From Billy Sunday

"As Billy Sunday has so well said, 'The saloon is a liar. It promises good cheer and sends sorrow. It promises health and sends disease. It promises prosperity and sends adversity. It promises happiness and sends misery. It causes the employee to lie to his employer. It degrades. It is God's worst enemy and the devil's best friend. It spares neither youth nor old age. It is waiting with a dirty blanket for the babe to crawl into the world. It lies in wait for the unborn. It corks the

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drunk before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphate hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush-out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

highwayman's pistol. It puts the rope in the hands of the mob. It is the anarchist of the world, and its dirty red flag is dyed with the blood of women and children. It sent the bullet through the body of Lincoln; it nerved the arm that sent the bullets through Garfield and William McKinley. Yes, it is a murderer. Every plot that was ever hatched against the Government and law, was born and bred, and crawled out of the grog shop to damn this country. I tell you that the curse of Almighty God is on the saloon. Legislatures are legislating against it. Decent society is barring it out. 'It is on the downgrade.'

"That there may be no mistake as to where I stand in reference to the liquor traffic and the saloon, having quoted as above, I now formally and deliberately adopt the foregoing and make that declaration my own. I say to you that in this incessant fight between the forces of righteousness and those of the wrong you want to do everything in your power for the creation in your respective communities of a public sentiment that will eventually not only eliminate the saloon from the particular localities in which you live but every vestige of the destroying traffic off from the face of the earth. It is an anachronism in this enlightened age.

"Now that you have the right of citizenship conferred upon you and that you have the privilege of entering into the battle of ballots, one of the greatest services that you could render this country would be to lend your assistance to the great fight against the use of intoxicating liquors in this country.

Not License

"Now that is the source and the institution from which we hear most about personal liberty. 'Personal liberty' is not personal license. I dare not exercise personal liberty if it infringes on the liberty of others. Our forefathers did not fight for personal license but for personal liberty, bounded by laws. The personal liberty which we hear so much about and so frequently is the personal liberty of a murderer, a burglar, a seducer, or a wolf that wants to remain in the sheepfold, or the weasel in the hen's roost."

"No, that is not the kind of liberty that our forefathers had in mind when they drafted the Declaration of Independence, nor is it the kind that I am trying to impress upon your minds today.

"Bolinbroke said 'Liberty is to the collective body, what health is to every individual body. Without health no pleasure can be tasted by man; without liberty no happiness can be enjoyed by society.'

"Simms said 'The only rational liberty is that which is born of subjection, reared in the fear of God and love of man, and made courageous in the defense of a trust and the prosecution of a duty.'

Quotations

"De Tocqueville said 'Christianity is the companion of liberty in all its conflicts, the cradle of its infancy, and the divine source of its claims.'

"Hillard said 'If liberty with law is fire on the hearth, liberty without law is fire on the floor.'

"Crowley said 'The liberty of a people consists in being governed by laws which they have made themselves, under whatsoever form it may be of government; the liberty of a private man in being master of his own time and actions, as far as may consist with the laws of God and of his country.'

"Robertson said 'False notions of liberty are strangely common. People talk of it as if it meant the liberty of doing whatever one likes—whereas the only liberty that a man, worthy of the name of man, ought to ask for, is, to have all restrictions, inward and outward, removed that prevent his doing what he ought.'

"Simmons said 'Liberty consists in the right which God has given us of doing, getting, and enjoying all the good in our power, according to the laws of God, of the State, and our conscience. True liberty, therefore, can never interfere with the duties, rights, and interests of others.'

"In view of the conceded reliability for conservatism together with the absolutely unimpeachable character of the authorities, and the integrity of the witnesses; the preponderance of the testimony; and the overwhelming weight of the evidence; is there any longer any doubt in your minds as to what is meant by liberty?

"No, no citizen of this Republic in the exercise of his liberty, in pursuance of the principles of this Government, therefore, can afford, I assure you, for his own sake, to trespass upon the liberty of others.

"It is not too much to say that in a practical sense these rights, as the inalienable property God-given to every man, and as a declaration of a practical truth are the exact analogue of the great moral principle embodied in the Golden rule—'Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you.'

"Do you realize that society cannot live and prosper except to the extent that it observes this rule?"

"That is the trouble today with some of our friends across the sea. Had this rule been observed there, we would not be witnessing today the bloodiest, most costly, and, to my mind, the most senseless, war that the world has ever seen. In the language of the Author of this great rule, let us reverently pray that the God of our Fathers forgive them, for some of them, apparently, know not what they do.

In Case of War

"Undenially there are times when it becomes necessary for a government to go to war. When that time comes for our government, let us see to it that our flag is never disgraced. Let all our wars—the ones for which we assume responsibility for bringing on—always be in the interests of humanity. This includes for us as a nation the rights of self defense. If our army and navy is increased and our coast fortifications strengthened let all that be for defense, and not for offense. Let us all remember, however, that the application of the principles that I am talking about today spells for the preparedness that our nation really needs. With this preparedness applied in our national affairs we will realize that it is better to have peace with honor than to have war in order that some of our Godless, conscienceless and selfish business enterprises may gather in profits for themselves though their ill-gotten fortunes be dyed with the blood of the innocent.

To Live for Country

"Oh, my fellow-citizens, the great need of our nation today is not so much men who are willing to die for their country, although sometimes that is necessary, but men who are willing to live for it. The battles of peace are always more triumphant than those of war! Mankind in community dwelling to preserve the peace, must at least maintain the outward semblance of such regards for the rights and feelings of others. All the failures of the human race to achieve happiness in their relations with each other, great or small, are directly traceable to a failure to be governed by the elementary law of social human existence.

"It is, indeed, the function of religion to teach us to live as moral, spiritual beings, and their instruction upon this point comes from the highest and most authoritative source—God Almighty himself. It is the function of human law to apply this rule to man in his physical outward surroundings. The best assurance of success in making humanity observe the laws from the higher motives is its training in the observance, primarily, of the law as a matter of self-interest. Improvement comes from below in every sense of the word.

"I charge you to so conduct your selves in your daily walks and conversation that you shall be judged by the law of liberty."

"Now, my fellow-citizens, bear in mind this important truth, that of all the countries of the earth, this is the only one, either in the present day or as far back as the records of history will take us, in which our principles of government, if not our actions in maintaining them, affords to each one the chance of development and advancement along these lines for which he was created.

Quotes Hughes

"As was so well said recently by the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, late Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States: 'We should all stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose; for patriotism that is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country, and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.' This, indeed, is thoroughgoing Americanism essential to our peace, security and perpetuity."

"America! America! God shed His Grace on thee And crown thee with the good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea."

"As God knows my heart, it is my sincere purpose so far as in my power lies to do my part to make it possible for my country, as the melting pot, to stand the supreme test."

Eternal Peace

"Indeed, if these ideals are accepted and practiced, not only by our citizens, but by our nation as a nation, the era of eternal peace will soon be ushered in, that time when the mountains of the Lord's house will be established in the top of the mountains; when swords shall be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning-hooks; when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more; when the reign of the blessed Emanuel, the Prince of Peace, the great Captain of our Salvation shall become universal and eternal."

"You and I have a very important part to perform in bringing about this happy condition. I am confident that our government can with confidence look to you to do your full part toward this end. God forbid that I should be found wanting."

"We should also be reminded even now of that continual warfare with the lying deceptions and vagaries of this world in which it is necessary for us always to be engaged. We are right now in the midst of this battle. It is glorious to fight against hate and gross injustice; for the right against the wrong. With Edward Steiner, that prince of American citizens, himself an immigrant, let us say 'If tomorrow our part in this battle ends, let us thank God for the part we have had in it thus far; let us thank God for the way He has led us into it; through hunger, homelessness and loneliness; the drudgery of work, the pangs of poverty and even the fires of affliction.'

"If we are to be kept in the struggle, then for each day of it new thanks; nor ought we to ask that the wind be tempered, the floods assuaged, or the fires cooled; just one thing we ask, that we keep the faith to the end."

"And when the end comes, if we shall have applied in our own lives the principles that I have tried to make clear today, we shall

"Go, not like the quarry slave at night, Scourged by his dungeon; but sustained and soothed By an unflinching trust, approach thy grave."

Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

"These, my friends, are some of the ideals best exemplified in the way we put into practice the principles which these rights and responsibilities impose, which go to make up the dignity of American citizenship."

"The right thinking citizens of the state are heart and soul with us," declared Mr. Pollard, "and we are going to win in the end, just as the Prohibitionists are winning all over America."

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society.

FINAL PROHIBITION VICTORY PREDICTED

GLENDAL, July 17.—That the prohibition battle has only commenced and that there is to be a great battle for the elimination of the sale of liquor in California, was the statement of W. L. Pollard at a mass meeting in the Glendale Christian Church.

"The right thinking citizens of the state are heart and soul with us," declared Mr. Pollard, "and we are going to win in the end, just as the Prohibitionists are winning all over America."

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society.

'CITIZENSHIP OBLIGATIONS' TALK BY J. P. BAUMGARTNER

flags. As they passed under the national colors, these were saluted. There were martial bands by the score. The spirit of the whole affair was that the United States must be ready, and so far as the paraders were concerned, that it was ready.

"I wondered at the time what proportion of all this was a bluff, and just how many of the enthusiasts shouting themselves red in the face would sidestep a recruiting station in case of emergency. Of course many of them were beyond the age of service, and so severe are the requirements that many of suitable age would be unable to pass the examination.

"The emergency came sooner than anticipated. It found the militia far below numerical requirement, and there was the hardest sort of scramble to induce the enlistment of a few hundreds.

"Goodbye to the comforting theory that a million men would spring up in a night. It would have been a longer night than prevails in an Arctic winter."

"Now there is surface truth, partial truth, apparent truth in that arraignment—again just enough real truth to make it a deadly civic poison."

"But I deny that it is fundamentally true. The reluctance to enlist as National Guardsmen was due to the fact that men do not take seriously the alleged imminence of war with Mexico. I doubt if they would take seriously an actual declaration or state of war with Mexico. But let war be declared against the United States by any first-class power, let a war im-pend that would menace our national life, and see how the men of this nation would rush to arms! The preparedness parade in Los Angeles was not an expression of sentiment in favor of preparedness for war with Mexico. It was an expression of sentiment in favor of national defense."

Scotch the Snake
"But, ladies and gentlemen, native-born and foreign-born, we must scotch this snake of civic cynicism. It is true there is some lip-service in this country, some jingoism, some supercilious spread-eagleism. And we may be pardoned a good-natured smile at some of the bumptious Fourth of July speeches heard and read. But when one thinks how the European system of government has broken down, how unfit for modern civilization government by kings has proven, it seems as if our spread-eagle orators have the right of it after all."

"The rule of kings is an anachronism. Inevitably, sooner or later, it leads to war. The common people, dazzled by the glitter of royalty, give up their lives and treasure, while kings make no such personal sacrifice. Where democracy really rules, war never starts."

"The fathers were right after all in their eulogy of American ideals. Whatever faults our political system has, at least established a government in which the man who suffers the most from war has some say about the fighting."

"When the people of Europe realize that their rulers have piled upon them a debt already amounting to fifty thousand millions of dollars, they will be likely to inquire seriously if they have had their money's worth."

"It is not impossible that they will fire the rulers, and tell them to pay the obligation themselves, and the rulers, failing to do this, not being accustomed to hard work, will fade from the scene."

"In other words, out of the jungle democracy, if not, nothing will arise; democracy, if not, nothing will arise; and the ruin now being writ across the face of civilization will become its epitaph."

The Antidote
"Ladies and gentlemen, instead of even good-natured cynicism of thought or speech about our country or our flag, let me give you, in the words of another—I don't know who, but God bless him whoever he may be—let me give you a Fourth of July thought for every morning of the year—a toast to the flag of our common country."

"When you see the Stars and Stripes displayed, son, stand up and take off your hat!"

"Somebody may titter. It is in our English blood to deride all expression of noble sentiment. You may blaspheme in the street, and stagger drunken in public places, and the bystanders will not pay much attention to you; but if you should get down on your knees in the street and pray to Almighty God, or if you should stand bareheaded while a company of old soldiers march by with their flag to the breeze, some people would think you were showing off."

"But don't you mind! When Old Glory comes along salute, and let them think what they please! When you hear the band play 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' while you are in a restaurant or hotel dining room, get up, even if you rise alone; stand there, and don't be ashamed of it, either!"

"For of all the signs and symbols since the world began there is never another so full of meaning as the flag of this country."

"That piece of red, white and blue bunting means 5,000 years of struggle upward. It is the full-blown flower of ages of fighting for liberty. It is the century plant of human hope in full bloom."

"It means the answered prayer of generations of slaves, of the helots of Greece, of the vassals of feudalism, of the serfs of Russia, of the blacks of America, of all who, whipped and caged, have crawled from the cradle to the grave through all time."

"Your flag stands for humanity, for an equal opportunity to all the sons of men. Of course, we haven't arrived yet at that goal; there are many injustices yet among us, many senseless and cruel customs of the past still clinging to us, but the only hope of righting the wrongs of men lies in the feeling produced in our bosom by the sight of that flag."

Stands for Men
"It stands for no race. It is not like an English, French or German flag. It stands for men, men of any blood who will come and live with us under its protection. It is the only banner that means mankind."

"It means the richest, happiest, youngest people on the globe."

"Other flags mean a glorious past, this flag a glorious future. It is not so much the flag of our fathers as it is the flag of our children, and of all children's children yet unborn. It is the flag of tomorrow. It is the signal of the 'Good Time Coming.' It is not the flag of your king, it is the flag of yourself and of all your neighbors."

"It has a power concealed in its folds that scatters abroad an influence from its flutterings. That power and influence mean that in due time, slowly and by force of law, yet surely as the footsteps of God, the last ancient fraud shall be smitten, the last unearned privilege be removed, the last irregularity set right, the last man shall have a place to work and a living wage, the last woman shall have all her rights of person and of citizenship, and the last and least of children shall be sheltered and trained and equipped by the sovereign state, and so have their right to live."

"Don't be ashamed when your throat chokes and the tears come, as you see it flying from the mast of a ship in the Bay of Gibraltar or the port of Singapore. You will never have a worthier emotion."

"That flag is the cream of all religions, the concentrated essence of the best impulse of the human race; reverence it as you would reverence the signature of the Deity."

For Opportunity
"By hundreds and by thousands the wretched victims of old-world caste are streaming westward, seeking here the thing that flag stands for—opportunity."

"It stands for the quick against the dead, the youth of the world against its senility."

"It stands for the open door of ambition against the closed door of caste. It stands for the stability of vigorous growth against the fixedness of hoary institutions."

"It waves defiance at all ghosts, they that have for long intimidated men; the ghost of monarchy, the ghost of aristocracy, the ghost of war, the ghost of ecclesiastic rule; all they that still lay shadowy hands upon the life of Europe and Asia."

"And when at last shall convene at The Hague that august 'parliament of man and federation of the world,' what better ensign could be hoisted above their deliberations than the flag of the United States of America, which has never stood for the narrowness of race nor the pride of blood, but always and only for human rights?"

"Listen, son! The band is playing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' They have let loose Old Glory yonder. Stand up! Some people over there are smiling at us. Stand up, and be damned to 'em."

Don't you know that almond growing is one of the easiest, quickest, most profitable (if you select the right locality) orchard crops in the state of California?

Do you know that according to Government reports, our consumption of nuts is increasing 15 per cent per annum? That 85 per cent of the almonds we consume are imported from Spain, Italy and France? That California produces 98 1/2 per cent of all the almonds produced in the United States?

Do you know the almond territory is more limited in area than that of the English Walnut and that Paso Robles Almonds were awarded the Gold Medal and a Bronze Plate for quality at the St. Louis Exposition? Don't you know that the TEMPLETON-PASO ROBLES district is being recognized as the coming almond district of the State? That many, many thousands of trees are being set out in this territory? In fact there is an almond boom there.

Would it interest you to know that young orchards there are producing $50.00 per acre in their third year?

LOS ANGELES PRODUCE MARKET
Apricots are playing out and it will only be another week or so when the fruit is wound up. As usual, when the season is about over for a commodity, wholesalers raise their prices and consequently the price of apricots was boosted yesterday to $1.40 and $1.65 a lug. A few boxes of cherries are still straggling into the city from Oregon but the price of 15 to 18 cents a pound is popularly too high to make the fruit popular.

Local vegetable dealers are having considerable difficulty in handling all the tomatoes that are pouring into Los Angeles. It seems that the production of tomatoes locally this year was heavy, and as the demand has been quiet for the past month, stocks are having a tendency to pile up and prices are growing softer.

CURRENT PRICES
[The following market prices on poultry and eggs, fruits and vegetables are compiled daily for the Register, based on the quotations prevailing on the Los Angeles produce exchange for the business day preceding. Every effort is made to keep these quotations accurate and down to the latest possible available figures.]

EGGS
Fresh ranch eggs, case count, 27; candied, 29@31; northern fresh extras, f.o.b. San Francisco, 28.

BUTTER
Butter—Creamery extras, 26c per pound; firsts, 24c. The selling price to the trade is 4 cents higher than the quotations.

GIANT MIRROR NEARLY READY FOR MT. WILSON

PASADENA, July 17.—The 100-inch mirror which will be the principal part of the great telescope now being built on the summit of Mt. Wilson—one which will be the largest in the world—at last has been silvered. This is the final stage of its manufacture.

The transportation of this mirror from the observatory shops at Santa Barbara street and Lake avenue to the summit of Mt. Wilson will probably be the most important trucking job ever undertaken. The glass is now kept at one temperature, but when it journeys up the mountain it will be greatly disturbed. It will regain its shape when under normal conditions. The correction in this mirror, which is concave, is so nearly perfect that any known methods of testing it cannot make it more so.

There have recently been two additions to the working staff at the Mt. Wilson observatory. One of these is Gustav Stornberg of Stockholm, Sweden, who has been given a grant by the Swedish government, and the other a well known Dutch astronomer, A. Van der Bilt.

SMITH BILL TO AID DESERT LAND ENTRYMEN

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Desert land entrymen throughout the entire southwest are much interested in the bill introduced by Representative Smith of Idaho to provide for the bonding of public and private lands for irrigation purposes.

The bill has passed the house, has been favorably reported by a senate committee and is now on the calendar. Senator Borah, who has it in charge, will call it up at the first favorable opportunity.

The purpose of the proposed legislation is to enable irrigation districts to distribute the cost of an irrigation system and its operation and maintenance over all the lands, both public and private, that are benefited.

KAISER DISMISSES 7 GENERALS FROM ARMY

ROTTERDAM, July 17.—According to the Berliner Tageblatt, the Kaiser has decided to pension seven Prussian generals. Five of the generals, namely, von Bredow, von Wiestkowski, Glogke, Cramer and von Zeuer, will leave the army, while Generals Von Kleist and Kraemer will be given garrison commands.

No reasons for the dismissals of the generals have been made public.

WYOMING'S ANSWER TO MILITARISM

Five Years Training of Schoolboys to Think True, Live True and Shoot True

BY GEORGE CREEL, IN EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE

On May 8, 1915, while a stunned nation read the death-roll of the Lusitania, the high-school boys of Wyoming were gathered in Cheyenne for a "cadet tournament" to determine their progress in physical development and military instruction. Small connection between the two events at first sight, yet the experiment of this western state in the training of citizen-soldiers may be the answer to a vital aspect of the demand for "preparedness" that is the direct result of the liner's destruction.

Some answer must be given. When all is said and done, the ultimate blasphemy is the defiance of facts. For the world to read, Europe has written the grim truth that not treaties nor love of peace nor excessive armaments can guard against the lightning-bolt of war. The task of wise patriotism in the United States today is to decide upon a rational plan of preparedness that will serve either to deter invasion or to resist it successfully.

Fortunately, choice does not lie between an ostrich-headed pacifism and a thick-headed militarism, discredited alike by history and the harsh realities of the day. There is a firm middle ground upon which all may stand who have their hearts set on peace without being blind to the necessity of defense. A citizen-soldier, already insisted upon by Everybody's, is the one plan that meets the needs of sane preparedness without the slightest sacrifice of democratic principles or menace to free institutions.

Nor is it necessary to turn eyes to Switzerland and Australia. For five years Wyoming has been pioneering in this delicate matter of military instruction in the schools, and now places results on the table for all the nation to see and study. The Swiss and Australian models have been followed in some degree, but the big outstanding features of the plan are entirely original, having particular regard for American ideals and prejudices.

Boston has had high-school cadets for fifty years, and Washington, D. C., for thirty-two years, but the Wyoming experiment lends itself to investigation because it has had the acid test of opposition.

Service in the cadet corps of Wyoming is not compulsory, and there is no such thing as active recruiting, yet ninety per cent of the high-school population of the state has volunteered.

Like most big ideas, the Wyoming experiment "just happened." In 1911, the War Office assigned Lieutenant Edgar Z. Steever to duty as inspector-instructor of the organized militia of Wyoming, for the nation still clings to its traditional belief that the National Guard has no need that cannot be met by casual contact with an officer of the regular army. Quite inevitably, Lieutenant Steever found time hanging heavily on his hands, and it was out of his restless energy that he conceived the idea of a cadet corps in the high-school of Cheyenne. The opposition that sprung instantly into angry life merits analysis because, in its essence, it typifies all opposition to any such ideas.

The labor unions refused to see anything in the plan but a training-school for the militia, and they reaffirmed their unalterable hostility to the National Guard as being nothing more than an armed force for the use of the employing class in industrial disputes.

Parents based their objections upon the ground that military instruction would exalt martial ideas in the mind of every youngster. Preachers opposed because they scented militarism; and educators were antagonistic out of their fear that individual initiative would be destroyed or personal responsibility undermined.

Lieutenant Steever might have followed the custom of his profession by denouncing those who opposed him as "traitors" and "mollycoddlers," but instead of that he analyzed the objections and devised ways of satisfying them in all fairness. It was at this point that the plan left beaten paths and commenced to take on originality.

To the labor unions he said: "I will agree to surrender all idea of compulsion. Enlistment shall be voluntary. I promise complete separation of the cadet corps from the militia, and the placing of entire emphasis upon national defense without reference to police duty for the state."

He went to the parents with these assurances: "We will make citizens, not soldiers. Your boys will be taught the advantages of a strong body and a clean mind, the value of self-control and decent restraints, civic duties and responsibilities. Our goal will be the full development of the fraternal instinct—the community-of-interest spirit—so that every youngster will grow up in the understanding that no group, whether it be a cadet company, city, state, or nation, is stronger than its weakest member."

The clergy and the pacifists were appeased with this frank statement of position: "The essence of militarism is excessive armaments and a huge standing army, while our purpose is no more than such training of youth during the school years as will permit them to devote their manhood to orderly civil pursuits. You cannot cut militarism out with a moral precept. You've got to crowd it out with something better and finer."

The attack of the educators on the score of destroyed initiative was met by a counter-attack. "Do you mean to say that the athletic sports of your schools develop initiative?" Lieutenant Steever demanded. "Go and listen a while to the coaches of football teams and baseball nines! You rattle the school or college for the strongest

The Register is indebted to Mrs. E. E. Keech for bringing to its attention this intensely interesting and exceptionally valuable article in the February number of Everybody's Magazine, describing the cadet work that is being done in Wyoming.

Mrs. Keech points out that the Wyoming plan seems to meet all the requirements of military and physical training as a foundation for citizen-soldiery (with the emphasis on citizen) without involving the ill-founded and very general objection to militarism. She is particularly pleased with the plan because it provides for almost universal physical culture in the schools, under proper restraint, which will take the place of the oft-times over-training, with at least limited discipline, of small segments of the school boys, incident to the present system of school athletics.

and most skillful, and put these chosen few in the hands of specialists who demand the blindest sort of obedience. This one-half of one per cent is the athletic expression of the student body. The ninety-nine and a half per cent get exercise by sitting in grand stands, and develop initiative by parroting cries that a yell-leader teaches them. What is this but a tragedy of wasted development? All thought for those who are strong at ready, and neglect for those who cannot make a team! My cadet plan reaches every boy in the school with a training that will strengthen him physically, mentally, and morally."

The Cheyenne school-board gave its consent at last, and Lieutenant Steever issued his call for volunteers. Just sixteen boys responded, their ages running from twelve to eighteen, and with even greater differences in the matter of physique. First of all Lieutenant Steever had the elect two leaders, and when this was done, two squads were formed of eight men each, the leaders taking turn about in choosing members. As a consequence, each squad contained an equal number of strong, medium and weak.

His squads formed, Lieutenant Steever straightway made appeal to the three fundamentals of juvenile life—love of games, the competitive instinct, and the "gang" instinct. "It's one squad against the other," he said. "Nip and tuck. We're going to have a tournament in January, and the winners will get gold medals. Remember, now, team play does it. Your squad's your gang, boys."

The setting-up exercises and calisthenics came under the routine, but Lieutenant Steever got the game note with competitive wall-scaling. Enlisting the services of a carpenter, he had two board walls, about eight feet four inches in height, chocked in place in the gymnasium. A fifteen-foot run started the climb, and the race was to see which squad could scramble over first.

Won gradually by the splendid time that the cadets seemed to be having, other boys dropped into line, so that by the day of the tournament fifty-five youngsters were working away and having the sport of their lives. No less a personage than the governor of the state opened the tournament with a stirring address, the big gymnasium was packed with the fathers and mothers and friends, the national colors were presented to the cadet corps, and then the squads took the floor and commenced the struggle for medals. No football game or baseball clash ever aroused the enthusiasm that shook the building as those youngsters willed through the drill or tore over the high wall, and when the bugle shrilled the last note the objection to a cadet corps died with it.

Every boy in the Cheyenne high-school was now enrolled, that is, every fit boy. In that institution, as in every other, a certain number of lads were found to be unfit for cadet work, and Lieutenant Steever devised a special course in physical training for this class that would bring them up to normal. One boy with a heart lesion plugged away for two years before the doctors pronounced him ready for the squad. Today he hasn't a weak spot in his whole body.

Looking over his ground, Lieutenant Steever hit upon a new idea that not only accentuated the non-militaristic emphasis, but also gave promise of stimulating youthful ardor to an even higher pitch. It was decided to let each squad have a sponsor, chosen from the girls of the school, who should be a member of the squad to all intents and purposes, sharing in high hopes, softening juvenile savageries, and giving a note of civility to the competition.

As spring wore away, the gymnasium was deserted for the open field, and Lieutenant Steever's eyes turned longingly to the mountains. It took a bit of arguing, but consent to two weeks of "camping out" was gained at last, and a joyous morning came when the cadets marched out of Cheyenne at a double quick, singing at the top of their young voices. Singing, by the way, is a Steever hobby.

Once in camp, instruction commenced to take wide sweeps. The boys learned to pitch their tents, to do their own cooking, and were taught the all-important fundamentals of sanitation and personal hygiene. There were extended-order drills and skirmishes, first aid to the injured practice, signal corps work, trench-digging, map-reading, and map-making; the secrets of woodcraft and plain-craft were revealed to them, and they even reached a point where they flung a sturdy bridge across a turbulent little mountain stream.

Hard and fast orders were never given. From the first, Lieutenant Steever bent every energy to make the clean-cut distinction between leadership and drivership. In camp he prefaced all new departures by conferences with the boys, "doping it out together," in order that the smallest cadet should understand the "why." In his own school-days he had been a member of the cadet corps in Washington, and he still remembered his boyish revolt against the "rock-crusher" style of drilling.

Intelligent obedience and unthinking acquiescence—got a competitive test in the Boer War. The autocratic English system failed, and the victory resulted with the democratized, thinking citizen-soldiers of Australia and Canada.

Target practice, naturally, proved a joyous feature of cadet life for the Wyoming boys. Rifles were borrowed from the War Office, and here again the competitive note was introduced by having the squads shoot, one against the other for medals. Lieutenant Steever holds the world's rifle record at 200, 500 and 1,000 yards, and today he makes the flat assertion that every visit to the range sees him hard pressed by his cadets for first honors.

In December, 1912, the third tournament was held, and as a sign of improvement, the wall scaling record was cut from twenty-five seconds to fourteen.

Now came a distressing interim. Lieutenant Steever was ordered away from Wyoming, and spent 1913 and 1914 down on the Mexican border herding revolutionists. During his absence, the cadet corps stood pat, holding its membership and interest, but the organization was too young to do without a guiding hand, and the mothers and fathers of Wyoming sent a call to Washington for the return of "the father of the idea." The demand was heeded, and as soon after January 1, 1915, as trains permitted, Lieutenant Steever was back on the job in Cheyenne.

But why Cheyenne alone? Had not the plan proved itself sufficiently to warrant its extension to other Wyoming towns? Well, he'd have a try at it, anyway. So over to Laramie went Lieutenant Steever; but even before he began to recite his arguments the school-board said: "Go to it. We've been watching your work in Cheyenne, and it looks mighty good to us." Rawlins and Casper returned similar answers, and so did Newcastle, Douglas and Lander. Today every municipality in Wyoming has either given its high school over to the cadet idea, or is building a gymnasium by way of preparation for it, and contiguous sections of Montana and Nebraska are asking for Steever.

In February, 1915, the first inter-city cadet tournament was held in Cheyenne. Casper sent one squad, Laramie two, Cheyenne entered three, and not even the famous Frontier Days caused larger measure of excitement in Wyoming. To the amazement of all but its devoted supporters, the Casper squad raced away with the gold medals, hanging up the remarkable time of eight seconds in the wall-scaling competition. It was a victory that enabled Lieutenant Steever to point a smashing moral. The age of the Casper squad ranged from twelve to eighteen, but not a youngster of the eight had ever touched tobacco in any form or been a victim to any evil habit.

The lesson was not allowed to lose its vividness. In May, 1915, a second inter-city tournament was held, this time with Rawlins added to the list, and again the Casper squad carried off first honors. Wall-scaling calls for five trials, and three times that gallant little eight did the trick in six and three-fifths seconds, a fourth run in six and three-fifths, and the fifth run in six and four-fifths. Think of it! A fifteen-foot dash, a wall eight feet four inches in height, each youngster with a heavy rifle in his hands, and the eight of them piling over in six and one-fifth seconds!

Is it any wonder that of the four-year boys in the Wyoming high schools only five out of twenty-five have less than forty-inch chests?

Patriotism, when unaccompanied by physical fitness, is not the splendid and effective passion that the pacifist gentlemen would have us believe when they declare that America's first call for defenders would find a million men in arms by nightfall. The record proves that fifty per cent of the men who offer for enlistment cannot be accepted, and that fifty per cent of those who are accepted die before the firing line is reached because they cannot stand the hardships of the open.

The idea must not be gained, however, that the Wyoming plan cares for nothing but a boy's chest and legs. There are scholarship squads as well as wall-scaling squads; and when the competitors are not fought out before cheering thousands, there are medals for the winners, and the rivalry is just as keen. Squad-leaders are elected, they take turns choosing members as in the case of the other squads, and the fight is to hang up the highest average in every branch of school work. These scholarship squads have their sponsors to urge them on, and the standings are posted on the bulletin-board every week, medals being awarded at the end of the term.

One squad-leader, whose team had lost the tournament, set out for a scholarship medal, and he won it by going to the homes of his backward members at night for the purpose of helping them with their lessons. Not very much "militarism" about that!

After five years of demonstration, the Steever idea has won the official stamp of approval by Wyoming and its people, regardless of class and circumstance, creeds and prejudices. Not one single prophesied evil has flowed from it, while the good results have exceeded the most sanguine expectation.

The principles of the high schools unite in this declaration: "Since the organization of the cadet corps, truancy is no longer a problem, nor do our boys quit school for a permanent enroute into industry. School life has been made interesting, and we have no trouble in keeping them for the complete course."

The juvenile judges say: "We are the doctors, but Lieutenant Steever is the sanitation. We prescribe, but he prevents. There used to be eight per cent of delinquency among high school boys, but the self-discipline and self-restraints of the cadets have wiped it out."

The warden of the penitentiary makes this succinct statement: "If Lieutenant Steever gets them, I don't."

These results are no more mysterious nor miraculous than the common sense of common sense. Every young ter wants his squad to walk away with the medals, and the first lesson brought home to him is the absolute necessity of "keeping in shape." When a squad finds that its chances of success are being endangered by the weakness of some one member, the cause is ferreted out, and unless he chooses "cut it" of his own accord, drastic action is taken. All the moral preachments of the good and all the harsh discipline of the marines, could not begin to compare with the results obtained by the boys themselves.

"Brickie," for instance, was Wyoming's most notorious "bad boy." He was the despair of parents, police, and school authorities, and when "Brickie" decided to become a cadet, the high school principal sent for Lieutenant Steever. "He hasn't a single redeeming quality," she moaned. "He is cruel, predatory, vicious, cunning, and as for honesty, he can lie faster than a horse can trot. If ever a boy was headed straight for the penitentiary, that boy's 'Brickie.'"

Now the trouble with "Brickie," as with almost every other "bad boy," was that his imagination and dynamic energies had never been provided with proper channels. As a consequence, they "backed up" and made a swamp full of evil growths. The cadet work gave "Brickie" these necessary channels, and his stagnancies drained off until his whole being ran sweet and clean.

His methods, to be sure, were a trifle summary. If a squad member didn't quit cigarettes and the other things that made for physical unfitness, "Brickie" gave him a trouncing. But his interest was the interest of the squad, and day by day he poured the fire of his own enthusiasm into the other seven until every one of them stood as fine and strong as "Brickie" himself.

Another tremendous benefit lies in the complete elimination of class distinctions and caste lines. Snobbery finds it impossible to live in the democratic atmosphere of the cadet corps, for just as every squad has its weak and strong so it is made up of the rich and the poor, the fauntleroy and the smicker. A feature of the cadet year is the parties given by the sponsor or by the squad itself under the supervision of the sponsor, and it may be the case that the sponsor is a banker's daughter, and the squad-leader the son of a miner.

Another democratizing influence lies in the entertainment arrangements during the inter-city tournaments. The boys and the sponsors are not sent to hotels, but are billeted on the members of the local corps. As a consequence the car-conductor's son may be the guest in the home of the car-conductor's president, or the son of a magnate may be occupying the spare room in the cottage of a workman.

The time to sow the seeds of democracy is in youth, before prejudices have had a chance to harden. A by-product of this system, by the way, is good breeding. No squad, when attending a party or visiting away from home, wants to be disgraced by a "rough-neck." Lessons in deportment that would be resisted and derided if they came from adults are heeded when they proceed from squad pride.

The very selection of squad-leaders is in itself a training in citizenship. At the beginning of each year an election is held by secret ballot. At the start, boy politics exercised a dominant influence, and many inefficiently by the influence of personal popularity or social standing. It was soon seen that an inefficient leader meant an inefficient squad, and each succeeding election witnessed an increase in the intelligent voting that is based on the merit of the candidate rather than his personality. Today the one thing that counts in a cadet election is the ability to deliver the goods.

Jim, for example, was a lad who reached up from one of the dark holes of the world, and caught the bottom rung of life's ladder. He started to climb, and at the time he entered the high school he was paying his way by all sorts of janitor work. The very courage that carried this boy over obstacles was the courage that wins out in cadet work, and there came an election when the votes of well-to-do boys named the young furnace-cleaner as squad-leader.

The most careful inquiry in Wyoming fails to reveal the slightest foundation for the fear that military instruction will irresistibly incline the juvenile mind to material pursuits. The four years of cadet work in the high school seems to satisfy the military desires of the normal boy. This is borne out by the experience of Boston, where compulsory military training in the schools has been in effect for fifty years. The percentage of enlistment in the United States army from Boston and its six suburbs is one-half of one per cent, the lowest in the United States.

The largest emphasis of this article has been placed upon the civic ideals of the Wyoming idea because it is from this direction that the attack comes principally. But the results obtained constitute an answer not only to the "professional" pacifist, but also to the "professional" militarist who remains wedded to the obsession of a standing army. Competent defenders are made as well as intelligent citizens! No less an authority than Major-General Wood commands unstintingly the military values of the Wyoming system in these words:

"Give these Steever cadets three months in a training-camp for the purpose of co-ordinating what they have learned, and familiarizing them with the work in the mass, and you will have as fine and efficient a body of troops as ever took arms in defense of a country. The high school training gives the boys the sound physical base that is the first essential to any rational plan of national preparedness. It teaches the important lesson of abstinence and self-mastery, and forms the invaluable habits of discipline and co-operative effort. Above all, it grounds them in the fundamentals of military science and training, lifting them above the raw volunteers who are the despair of officers in a crisis."

Certainly no plan of an adequate national defense yet broached deserves larger consideration than the Wyoming idea. Aside from the fact that it gains every desired result without the slightest impingement upon American ideals, there are the added advantages of simplicity and economy. Given a gymnasium, which no school should lack, the only additional expense lies in the erection of scaling walls and the purchase of uniforms. In 1914, however, the Wyoming legislature passed a law providing a fund for furnishing uniforms to the cadets, and this generous example could be followed with profit by other states.

Also it is in the province of the War Department, by act of Congress, to lend rifles, bayonets, cartridge-belts, and canteens to such cadets, and to supply each individual with 120 rounds of ammunition annually.

No larger task remains, then, than the division of the United States into districts, and the assignment of army officers to school duty in these districts.

The problem of continued instruction, contained in the scheme of a national reserve, is solved by the very summer camps that are an integral part of the regular work. As they fall during the vacation period, the district officer would merely transfer his activities from the school to the open for the three months of June, July and August.

Two weeks would serve the needs of the school-going cadet, but graduates would remain the full three months in order to gain the co-ordination suggested by General Wood. For the next two years these graduates need report only for two weeks, and, for the following three years, ten days a year. Six years of it—from nineteen to twenty-five, say—without interrupting the business of life, and then inclusion in the great trained national-reserve force ready for any exigency of national peril.

The War Department is already committed to the policy of supplying these camps with all necessary equipment, as well as the necessary instructors and the personnel for the organization and maintenance of camp-wagon transports, medical care, and sanitation.

Here, then, is a plan that has stood the test of five years of practice—a plan based upon voluntary action, without suspicion of militarism, and admittedly productive of better citizens as well as fit defenders.

It is in this very absence of compulsion that the inherent weakness of the scheme is found. To be forced to wait on the voluntary action of individual school-boards is to put the entire problem of national defense at the mercy of the community. Nor will it suffice to assume that the success of the plan will lead inevitably to its universal spread.

Education is the imperative need of democracy, and no principle is more firmly established than compulsory school laws; yet even today four states are without such laws, poisoning the wells of progress with their high percentages of illiteracy. If commonwealths cannot be trusted to appreciate an obvious necessity like education, may more patriotic answers be expected from localities in the more or less abstract matter of national defense?

To realize its full possibilities, the training of citizen-soldiers must be universal, and this means such measure of Federal authority as will bring even the most backward community into line. The very fact that only five per cent of the 16,000,000 grade-school pupils ever enter high school forces home the conclusion that the system of military instruction must embrace the upper grades of the ward schools.

There is no validity in the outcry against compulsion. It is one of those "bogy" words that arise at regular intervals to befuddle and retard. As applied to the business of national defense, it is no more undemocratic than the compulsion that is used in education, health laws, sanitation laws, workmen's compensation laws, or in the very criminal code itself. In its essence it is not compulsion at all, but merely majority enforcement of such action as majority agreement deems necessary for the advancement and protection of the nation, the state, the city and the individual.

Each year in the United States one million youths enter manhood's estate. The training of these boys during their school years is the one democratic solution of the problem of America's "unpreparedness." When all is said and done, the chief value of the Wyoming experiment is its positive proof that such training can be given with advantage to democracy, and without hurt to the individual, to the community, or to free institutions.

NEW ORLEANS, July 17.—John M. Parker in a statement issued here virtually withdraws as vice presidential candidate of the Progressive party and delivers what is interpreted as a bitter attack on Theodore Roosevelt, although the Colonel is not mentioned by name. Incidentally Mr. Parker asks that the Progressives hold another convention in Chicago August 5 to name a presidential and vice presidential nominee.

Mr. Parker in his statement, which is addressed to "The patriotic men and women of America," says: "The Progressive has been deserted by a large part of our officers. They could not stand the acid test. The Bull Moose led his followers into the wilderness, and there deserted them. Let us generously bury that emblem and adopt as the new emblem of the Progressive party the national bird, the American eagle."
